FULL PROGRAM OF CITY JUBILEE IS MADE PUBLIC

Gay Events in All Parts of Chicago.

The complete program for the Chicago Jubilee, the product of intensive effort by the co-ordinating committee of the Association of Commerce, was announced yesterday by Frederick J. Ashley, chairman of the committee.

F. J. ASHLEY. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

"Now that the program is completed," said Mr. Ashley, "I think the committee without exaggeration can promise a fortnight of civic celebration on a scale of which Chicago, the second city in America, can be proud, and one which no other American city could equal."

From the opening of the Jubilee on Sunday morning with solemn services of thanksgiving in all the churches until its close on Wednesday, May 17, with the greatest display of army air strength ever assembled, the Jubilee will be a fast moving panorama of civic pride.

Events Crowd Progress.

There will be parades downtown and in the neighborhoods, athletic spectacles such as the American-French international Golden Gloves tournament in soldiers' field under the sponsorship of The Chicago Tribune, pyrotechnical displays and luncheons in honor of national and international notables. Details as to time, place and sponsorship of the events of the Jubilee will be found in the official program, which is given in full below.

One of the most elaborate features of the downtown parade, which will move down Michigan avenue next Monday night in signal of the beginning of Jubilee festivities, will be a series of floats depicting the progress of highway transportation. The Chicago Automobile Trade association is sponsoring the presentation.

Pageant of Highway Advance.

Leading the exhibit will be a team of oxen yoked to a crude cart, and driven by their owner, garbed in the attire of a century ago. The ox team is being brought from Bronson, Mich. Following the oxen will come a float bearing a house with an Indian scout astride.

The third stage of highway transportation will be represented by a group of young women, in the quaint costumes of the last century, one riding a bicycle of the vintage of 1868, three others on a three seater of a later period, and a quartet on a bicycle called the "quad."

The next three floats in line will portray the era of the horseless carriage, the first float bearing an ancient single cylinder machine built in 1900, the second a more elaborate single cylinder contraption with mud guards, and the third one of the huge and elaborate creations of later years, with brass trimmings and overstuffed leather cushions.

The Modern Automobile.

The seventh and most elaborate float will take the form of a tall column, upon which will be set a replica of the 1931 motor car, in the back seat of which will be placed a globe, symbolizing the fact that the world rides in automobiles.

Around the column will be seated twenty-eight young women, each wearing a ribbon naming a different make of car. The girls will be garbed in gowns of latest style in harmonizing tones of shades.

The Michigan avenue motor row from 21st to 26th street will be gaily illuminated and decorated throughout the Jubilee and A. C. Faeh, general manager of the Automobile Trade association, announced that a number of aerial stunts are being arranged for the Monday night parade.

Full Program Announced.

The complete program of the Jubilee, as announced by the Association of Commerce, follows:

SUNDAY, MAY 10.

Union services in all churches of the metropolitan district under auspices of the Federation of Churches, the Roman Catholic diocese, and other religious bodies. James F. Bigos, chairman.

2 p. m.—American Legion Hospital day; concerts at Edward Hines Jr., Great Lakes, and other local veterans' hospitals. All are urged to visit veterans' hospitals during the day.

8 p. m.—Chicago Jubilee and Mother's day program for the Chicago lodge of Elks

LEO BROTHERS DENIED RETRIAL; HEARS SENTENCE

Calls Lingle Slayer's Hearing Fair.

Leo V. Brothers, slayer of Alfred Lingle, was denied a new trial yesterday by Judge Joseph Sabath in the Criminal court and sentenced to 14 years in the penitentiary in accordance with the verdict of a jury. In his written opinion Judge Sabath pointed out that Brothers and his attorneys admitted that he had a fair trial and that this so appears of record. The judge ruled that there were no legal errors in the trial sufficient to upset the verdict of the jury.

Brothers assumed an attitude of indifference when brought into the courtroom to hear the judge decide on his motion. He, however, became surly after the formal ruling was entered and for the first time refused the request of photographers for a picture.

Brothers Alone in Court.

The defendant was alone in court, except for Attorney James C. O'Brien, one time star prosecutor, who had argued the new trial motion. Neither the defendants' mother, his sisters nor his girl friend, Betty Cook, were in the courtroom to hear Judge Sabath pronounce sentence.

Outside of the regular court attaches only four persons were in the courtroom to hear the judge decide the motion. This was in contrast to the crowds which had fought to get into the courtroom during the trial.

The judge started to read his opinion immediately after court was called to order.

Anxious for Fair Trial.

"I realize the importance of this case," said the judge. "I have realized it from the time of its inception. It is a case in which there has been an unusual amount of public interest. There has been a sharp division in the public mind as to the guilt or innocence of this defendant. For these reasons I have been especially anxious that the defendant should have not only a fair trial but that every opportunity be afforded him to present his defense.

"In view of this fact it was especially gratifying to have the defendant, himself, as well as his counsel, come into open court and state that he has received a fair and impartial trial at the hands of this court, and ask to make that statement a part of the record.

"Every request for time within which to procure witnesses has been granted.

Tells of Brothers' Lawyers.

"The defendant during the trial was represented by three lawyers, two of whom at least have had long experience defending in criminal cases. In addition to this they had with them as counsel in the case, Mr. Robert Cantwell Sr., a man noted for his ability and success as a defense lawyer in criminal cases. [Mr. Cantwell withdrew as an attorney of record in the case before the trial started.]

"The jury selected to hear the evidence was composed of men far above the average. They saw the witnesses and heard the evidence. The law has given to them the power not only to pass on the weight of the evidence but in this case to fix the penalty as well, and after due deliberation they have returned their verdict.

"Having seen the witnesses and heard their testimony myself, I find no reason for disturbing their verdict on that ground. I have endeavored to give careful attention to every point raised and argued on the motion for a new trial and paid strict attention to all other objections urged in support of said motion, and do not believe that any of them are of sufficient weight or importance to justify the granting of a new trial.

Appeal at No Cost.

"If I am in error in this the defendant has his remedy in the Supreme court. To facilitate such an appeal the defendant has already been furnished by this court with a transcript of the proceedings and the evidence, without any cost to him. If the defendant elects to sue out a writ of error from the Supreme court I shall be glad to extend every assistance, without any cost to the defendant, that the law permits to enable him to have a fair hearing in the Supreme court.

"The motion for a new trial is, therefore, overruled and the defendant sentenced, on the verdict, to the penitentiary at Joliet, for the term of fourteen years."

Attorney O'Brien was then granted sixty days in which to file his bill of exceptions with the Supreme court. Assistant State's Attorneys C. Wayland Brooks and John Holman, who prosecuted the case, said they would do everything in their power to facilitate the appeal.

DR. A. A. MICHELSON IS GIVEN ONLY FEW MORE HOURS TO LIVE

Pasadena, Cal., May 8.—(AP)—Dr. Albert A. Michelson, who measured the speed of light and made possible the measurement of distances of stars, was near death tonight. Physicians said there was no hope and life was but a matter of hours for the 78-year-old scientist, stricken with paralysis.

The profound mind, that physicists throughout the world say was one of the greatest in contemporary science, snapped last night with a cerebral hemorrhage.

Until 5:30 p. m. the mind functioned with lucidity. The dean of American physicists, knowing the end was but a matter of days, had been informed his last experiment on a new, precise measurement of the speed of light was successful.

This was the one thing he seemed to care about. He called Prof. Francis G. Pease of the Mount Wilson laboratory, who was conducting the experiment, to his bedside and started dictation.

Thus he wrote the introduction to the paper that will tell of this last great experiment that astronomers and physicists say will go down the ages like the work of Galileo and Newton. This will be published, it was revealed by Dr. Walter S. Adams, director of the Carnegie Institution of Washington observatory.

DO-X Dashes for Brazil on Atlantic Hop

BERLIN, May 8. — (AP) — A Telegraphen Union dispatch tonight reported that the giant German flying boat DO-X, which started to fly to America Nov. 5, 1930, had left the Bissagos islands, off Portuguese Guinea, this morning on her flight across the Atlantic.

The dispatch said the great seaplane had headed for Fernando do Noronha, 200 miles off the Brazilian coast. The distance to this island is some 1,600 miles.

30 Hour Trip Estimated.

Some perplexity was expressed by the company officials at absence of direct news from the airship. It was pointed out that she has wireless equipment and communication can be made with the Berlin office while the plane is in the air.

It is estimated that approximately thirty hours would be required for the huge flying boat to make the hop from the west coast of Africa to Fernando do Noronha. It is possible the officers of the DO-X might continue on to Natal, Brazil, without making the stop at Fernando do Noronha.

MISHAPS DOG GIANT PLANE.

Several mishaps have delayed the takeoff of the DO-X on its flight to South America. While anchored off Lisbon last November a fire swept through one of her great wings, causing considerable damage. The blaze was believed to have started from a short circuit in the electrical wiring. Repairs were made and the plane moved on to Las Palmas in the Canary islands Jan. 31.

The understructure was somewhat damaged when smashed by a wave there Feb. 3. This also was repaired.

Previously the ship had made test flights, visiting Holland, England and France.

The DO-X, known as "the world's greatest flying machine," is 130 feet long and has a wing spread of 160 feet. She was built to carry 100 passengers, although only a skeleton crew is with her now. She has 12 engines of 500 horse power each. Inside the ship there are three decks with a bridge forward enclosed in glass.

REVOLVER FIRED BY MISTAKE KILLS GIRL IN CHURCH

Quincy, Ill., May 8.—(AP)—Mildred Hughes, active in amateur theatricals here, was accidentally shot and killed tonight in the primary room of Grace Methodist church by Robert Randall, a young man who, like Miss Hughes, was awaiting rehearsals of the Grace Methodist Episcopal players' next production.

Two revolvers to use in the play were lying on a table as ten of the cast awaited arrival of the eleventh and last member. The weapons had been fired with blank cartridges in previous rehearsals.

Randall had picked up one of the guns and was handling it when it discharged, striking Miss Hughes, who was about ten feet away. She fell, the bullet having pierced her side and passed through a lung.

Coroner Louis Terlisner, setting the inquest for tomorrow, said the shooting was unquestionably accidental. Police took Randall into custody for questioning, but were expected to release him.

A. R. Weisenburger, a member of the cast, who brought the revolver to the church, also was taken into custody.

LOUIS EXPLAINS ABOUT ALIMONY, BUT ALL IN VAIN

Louis Kaukusch, 55 years old, explained to Circuit Judge Trude yesterday why he should not be expected to pay more than $1.50 weekly alimony to his wife, Elizabeth, pending settlement of her suit for divorce.

"I think $1.50 is plenty," Kaukusch volunteered after admitting that he has $6,000 in a savings account. "She only eats spinach and potatoes. I tried to get her to eat more food and put on weight, but she refussd. She can't use more than $1.50 a week."

"Your honor, I eat $5 worth of food every week," the wife interposed. "And I need another $5 a week for my medicine."

Judge Trude decided Kaukusch could afford $10 a week for his wife's support. Mrs. Kaukusch charges cruelty. The couple were married Oct. 4, 1928, and separated Feb. 15, 1931.

Auto Breaks Off Hydrant; Neighborhood Is Flooded

Otto Fischl and his automobile were drenched and several basements were flooded last night by water which spouted from a main at 88th and Muskegon streets, when Fischl's machine broke off a fire hydrant. Before Capt. Thomas McMannon of Engine company 87 could cut off the powerful stream, it ate a hole 12 feet in diameter in the ground and unearthed a section of the sidewalk. Fischl, who lives at 638 92d place and is 19 years old, was charged with reckless driving by the South Chicago police.

Food Prices Skid to "Way Back When"

Chicagoans during the week of the Chicago Jubilee will find real cause to be jubilant in the price lists for foodstuffs. Prices, which have been sliding gradually downward over the last year, have taken a sharp drop this spring. The shopper's dollar in May, 1931, will buy a lot more food than it did in May, 1930.

In fact, prices are approaching those of a former generation, the days "way back when" it was possible to buy a dozen eggs or a pound of hamburger for 15 or 20 cents.

A TRIBUNE reporter who went shopping yesterday, with a notebook instead of a market basket gathered at random a list of prices which show that from 10 to 50 per cent has been cut from the prices of meat, vegetables, dairy products, and fruit.

Many Articles Reduced.

Few articles have escaped the general price cutting. Even seasonal foods which have not yet reached the markets in large quantities are selling for prices which prevailed at the peak of the season last year. Shortage in supply has prevented substantial reductions in some articles, but all have experienced some degree of price shaving.

A survey of wholesale markets revealed that fresh fruits and vegetables average 15 to 20 per cent below the end of April, 1930; butter, cheese, and eggs are hanging around the lowest price range they have reached in 20 years; meats are 27 to 32 per cent below a year ago, and citrus fruits are about 50 to 60 per cent lower than the 1930 price.

| | May, 1931. | May, 1930. |
| Flour [5 lb. bag] | .18 | .25 |
| Flour [10 lb. bag] | .33 | .42 |
| Flour [24½ lb. bag] | .75 | .90 |
| Butter [lb.] | .24 | .41 |
| Eggs [doz. carton] | .24 | .32 |
| Eggs [doz. bulk] | .20 | .26 |
| Potatoes [Idaho, peck] | .27 | .60 |
| Coffee [lb.] | .29-.37 | .34-.42 |
| Cabbage [lb.] | .03 | .07 |
| Spinach [lb.] | .06 | .09 |
| Navy beans [bulk, lb.] | .06 | .09 |
| American cheese [lb.] | .19 | .29 |
| Prunes [lb.] | .06 | .15 |
| Grapefruit | .07 | .14 |
| Raisins [pkg.] | .10 | .11 |
| Macaroni & spaghetti [bulk, lb.] | .06 | .08 |
| Rice [bulk, lb.] | .05 | .07 |
| Lard [tub, lb.] | .10 | .12 |
| Oleomargarine [pkg.] | .19 | .23 |

Surveying canned goods, it was found that most grades have dropped a notch or two. Here are some of the prices noted at random:

| | May, 1931. | May, 1930. |
|---|---|---|
| Corn [No. 2 can] | .09 | .10 |
| Peas [No. 2 can] | .08 | .10 |
| Tomatoes [No. 2 can] | .08 | .11 |
| Peaches [No. 2½ can] | .21 | .25 |
| Apricots [No. 2½ can] | .25 | .29 |
| Salmon [No. 1 can] | .13 | .17 |
| Canned milk [16 oz.] | .07 | .09 |
| Preserves [No. 1 jar] | .19 | .21 |

A number of these food items are due for further reductions as the lowering of wholesale prices is carried into the retail market. In fresh food staples there has been a reduction of from 10 to 15 per cent, according to W. H. Hall, in charge of the Chicago office of the fruit and vegetable market reporting service of the United States department of agriculture.

"Potatoes, for instance, are about 30 per cent lower," he said. "Apples are 40 per cent lower, onions from the 1930 crop are about 50 per cent below last year; cabbage, both old and new, is considerably lower. This reduction may not be true of produce bordering on the luxury class this time of the year, such as strawberries and asparagus, but where a reduction in wholesale prices has occurred it appears that most of this has been passed on to the benefit of the consumer."

Fruit Down by 50 Per Cent.

In Chicago's fruit supply prices are about 50 per cent lower than they were this time last year, according to Charles W. Irrgang, vice president of the Chicago Fruit Auction.

"Citrus fruits have been selling for

Crowds See Thrilling E. St. Louis Raid.

Six alleged members of the Fred Burke gang, wanted for questioning in connection with kidnapings, bank holdups, and other crimes, were seized late yesterday in a spectacular raid on a machine gun nest in East St. Louis. They were immediately placed in automobiles under heavy guard and started for Chicago.

The caravan reached Springfield at midnight, where the prisoners were locked up for the night. They will be brought here today.

Pals of Burke in Net.

One of the captives is Tommy Hayes, former member of the Cuckoo gang of St. Louis, and now affiliated with the notorious Shelton gang of East St. Louis, which includes some of the former followers of Fred Burke, who is now serving a life sentence in Michigan for the murder of a policeman. The other prisoners taken yesterday are Thomas O'Connor, a close associate of Burke; Jack Britt, Howard Lee, Edward O'Hara, and William McQuillian.

Britt and O'Connor were once arrested and tentatively identified in the murder last October of Mrs. Cora Garrison of Peoria. She was slain when hoodlums tried to abduct her gambler husband, Clyde Garrison. Lee, said to be known also as Herman Lamm, was arrested some time ago in Edwardsville, Ill., for murder and a bank robbery. The case was never disposed of.

Face Quizzing on Crimes.

The prisoners will be questioned at State's Attorney Swanson's office by Assistant State's Attorneys Charles Mueller and Charles Lounsbury.

Among the crimes on which they will be interrogated are the kidnapings of James Hackett, Blue Island gambler, who paid a reputed $150,000 ransom for his release on May 3; Fred J. Blumer, wealthy brewer of Monroe, Wis., who was liberated last month after being held captive for a week; and Dr. Isaac D. Kelley, specialist of St. Louis, who was freed on April 28 after having been a prisoner for a week.

Other crimes about which the six prisoners will be questioned are the $1,000,000 holdup of the Lincoln National bank at Lincoln, Neb., last year, and the $300,000 robbery of the Jeffries State bank in Milwaukee. The looting of a bank at Plano, Ill., and the murder of an American Express messenger in Ohio may also be subjects of inquiry.

Chicago Police in Raid.

The raid in East St. Louis was staged after long investigation by the state highway police. Participating in the arrests were Sergts. Roy Steffens and Charles Tousinsky, attached to the racket bureau of State's Attorney Swanson's office; Sergt. Oliver Kempster of the state highway police at Sterling, and a dozen deputies under Sheriff Jerome Munie of St. Clair county, which embraces East St. Louis.

Ten men were arrested in the raid, but four of them were released. The six held were handcuffed and started for Chicago.

The raid was probably one of the most thrilling ever staged in a city. It was directed at an apartment on the second floor of an apartment hotel in the 300 block on Broadway, in the downtown district of East St. Louis. A huge crowd watched the police as they mounted machine guns and cleared a field of fire about the building at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

Machine Guns Guard Street.

Twenty deputies and the Chicago and Sterling policemen, under the direction of Sheriff Munie, mounted the machine guns at street intersections, all commanding entrances and exits of the hotel. Broadway was roped off for one block on either side of the gang nest to keep the street clear.

Deputies were posted at alleys, along the street, and at the entrance to the Broadview hotel, across the way from the gang rendezvous.

Another detail stood guard, with guns drawn, at the entrance to Ralph [Wide Open] Smith's beer flat, near by, where three men were slain several months ago.

Submachine guns were mounted on an adjoining roof.

Throngs Watch Raiders.

Office and hotel windows were crowded with men and women viewing the scene. At the extremes of the danger area, marked off by ropes, hundreds of women and children gathered. Some, sensing the possible danger, sheltered themselves behind posts.

At a signal from Sheriff Munie the raiders advanced. Apparently the elaborate preparations, completed with trained skill reminiscent of battlefield experience, had not attracted the suspicions of the gangsters.

The deputies and Chicago sergeants rushed into the hideout, guns drawn. No resistance was offered. It would have been fatal. Hayes and his nine followers surrendered peaceably, and a few minutes later walked out of the hotel closely guarded by the raiders. They were shoved into patrol wagons and hurried to the sheriff's office.

Fifteen modern submachine guns were found in the apartment. Further search revealed a large supply of ammunition and dynamite.

Gangster Defies Sheriff.

Hayes broke out vehemently when he was pushed into Munie's office. He turned to the sheriff and snarled: "When I get out it'll take seven guys like you to run this town."

He followed this by flinging a cuspidor at a news photographer. The photographer dodged and the heavy missile crashed through a window. Hayes was overpowered.

Word of the arrests was flashed immediately to Prosecutors Mueller and Lounsbury in Chicago. They ordered the prisoners brought here. Chief Walter Moody of the state highway police also was notified at Sterling, where he was attending a dedication ceremony with Gov. Emmerson. He also ordered the captives taken to Chicago.

It was Chief Moody who told of the governor's anxiety to drive hoodlums from the state.

Just Beginning, Moody Says.

"Gov. Emmerson told me he wanted every hoodlum and gangster driven from the state," he said. "This is just the beginning. We will drive every major hoodlum from Illinois. We want this particular gang for bank robberies and five kidnapings, among them those of Blumer, Hackett and Dr. Kelley."

Chief Moody said it was possible this gang might be connected indirectly with the hoodlums seized a little more than a year ago across the street from the state capitol in Springfield. Reports then were that the gangsters, armed with guns, goggles and adhesive tape, meant to kidnap Gov. Emmerson. Chief Moody said last night that the band was reported to have had kidnaping objectives in mind ranging from the governor to lesser personalities.

Gang Started for Chicago.

The prisoners in East St. Louis were ordered brought to Chicago by way of Sterling. Chief Moody will question them there this morning, and perhaps accompany the caravan on to Chicago.

As soon as Sheriff Munie and state highway policemen had talked by phone with Chief Moody, the seven captives were placed with their guards in three automobiles. Two machines carrying armed policemen preceded the three cars, and a sixth automobile, containing men armed with submachine guns and shotguns followed.

A police squad left Chicago, it was understood, to meet the caravan. Another left Springfield earlier to act as escort from Litchfield to the capital.

End of the Burke Gang.

Officials were uncommunicative concerning the facts that led to the raid. All admitted the prisoners were suspected of kidnapings for ransom and bank holdups. One intimated that murder might be involved. All agreed the arrests meant the final breakup of the Burke gang.

This gang got a start in St. Louis as part of the Cuckoo gang and the notorious Egan's Rats. With Burke's difficulties his followers began to fall away, some of them aligning with the Shelton mob. Other Burke hoodlums went to Ohio, where one, it is believed, participated in the murder of the express company messenger. They moved later to Detroit, specialized in abductions, with Chicago and Minneapolis men as victims, and later returned to the St. Louis sector.

HIGH BONDS IN ROBBERY CASE.

Total bonds of $755,000 were fixed yesterday for Walter Wilts, 19 years old, 4617 Vincennes avenue, and William Roberts, 18, of 3024 Prairie avenue, colored, on charges of robbery when they were arraigned before Judge John J. Lupe in the South Chicago court.

FEDERAL AGENTS PROBE HACKETT KIDNAPING STORY

Federal internal revenue agents yesterday began an investigation of the kidnaping story of James Hackett, Blue Island gambler, who declared that he was ransomed with $150,000 last Sunday. The disclosure of the investigation followed the filing in federal court of an income tax lien, claiming $354,639, by Acting Collector Robert E. Neely.

ROBERT NEELY.

The tax lien was filed by Mr. Neely immediately after Hackett had notified the collector's office that he would be unable to pay an offer in compromise of his tax liabilities. It was reported that he had negotiated for several weeks over a compromise offer, and that an undisclosed sum had been tentatively agreed upon.

Claims $150,000 Was Paid.

Investigation of Hackett's kidnaping story by Pat Roche, chief investigator of the state's attorney's office, and other county authorities, failed either to establish or disprove its authenticity. Hackett claimed that he was kidnaped on Friday from the Navajo Fields Country club and held until his wife, Adeline, and friends paid the $150,000 ransom.

Roche's investigation did show that Hackett's wife had removed the contents of some safe deposit boxes, sold some securities and arranged to have him sign a mortgage on their expensive home at 12916 South Greenwood avenue, Blue Island, as Hackett had claimed. Edward [Spike] O'Donnel, south side gangster, who was questioned in connection with the purported kidnaping, said that Hackett's story was a gesture to defraud the government.

Owes $202,218 in Tax.

The lien against Hackett ties up all property that may be found in either his or his wife's name. It charges that he owes a tax of $202,918, penalties of $92,942, and interest of $58,778, for the years 1914 to 1929, inclusive, during which time his income was allegedly more than $2,000,000. He filed no returns.

The government's investigation, it was said, has not progressed to the point where it can be determined whether criminal charges will be brought against the gambler.

City Engineer Gayton, who was forced to take a month's vacation after the recent mayoralty election, was suspended yesterday by Commissioner of Public Works Sprague pending investigation of the examination paper he wrote and on which he was promoted to the city engineer job. This is the first step taken by the present administration to investigate any of the promotional examinations held under the last administration.

ST. LOUIS GANGSTER FOUND SLAIN IN AUTO NEAR EDWARDSVILLE

Edwardsville, Ill., May 8.—(AP)—Carmelo Fresina, also known as Charles Freese, gangster, extortionist, and bootlegger, was found shot to death in an automobile near here today.

Fresina, one of St. Louis' most notorious gangsters, was shot twice in the back of the head by assassins, apparently as he sat at the wheel of the automobile.

He left his home in St. Louis last night after telling his wife he was going away to "fix those liquor cases against me." Mrs. Fresina said she was ignorant of the nature of the cases.

In the automobile, near the gangster's body, was found a woman's small black hat and two small grips. One of them contained women's clothing and the other cosmetics, a powder puff and a bottle of what appeared to be eyewash.

Police said they believed the slaying was the result of Fresina's liquor activities. Deputies searched the woods, believing it possible Fresina's slayers had done away with his companion, if he had one.

Fresina was suspected in five slayings without being convicted of a felony until last June. He was convicted of shooting at a federal prohibition officer and his sentence of six years was recently affirmed by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals.

LAW OPPOSED TO FORBID SHOOTING BY DRY OFFICERS

Wickersham and Baker Join in Protest.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., May 8.—(Special.)—George W. Wickersham, chairman, and Newton D. Baker, member of the law enforcement commission, today defeated a proposal in the meeting of the American Institute of Laws which would deprive officers of the right to shoot in attempting to arrest suspected prohibition offenders.

G. W. WICKERSHAM [Acme Photo.]

Mr. Wickersham said he felt that this is no time to tie the hands of peace officers. If anything, they should be strengthened, he added. Mr. Baker said he never knew of an officer shooting wantonly.

Cites New York Battle.

"Organized crime is our serious problem," he continued. "I do not want criminals to feel that any statute drawn affecting the right to kill or wound in making an arrest is aimed at the officers. There is a story in the morning papers of the arrest of two bandits in New York which reads like a skirmish on the western front on a minor scale. An officer takes his life in his hands in arresting a member of one of our organized gangs."

After hearing these and other objections the institute voted to return the proposed law to the committee for revision.

The institute recommended legislation by the states empowering the judge and prosecuting attorney to comment on the failure of a defendant to testify in his own defense.

Floyd Thompson Dissents.

"From my experience as a prosecutor," he said, "I would say that the provision of law prohibiting comment by the judge and prosecutor on the failure of a defendant to testify never has prevented the conviction of a guilty person."

DRY AGENTS WHO SLEW FARMER IN CUSTODY OF U. S.

Local Sheriff Unable to Make Arrests.

Columbus, Miss., May 8.—[Special.]—Responsibility for prosecution of three federal revenue agents, who last night killed J. Wales Land, 27, on the Land farm, near here, passed this afternoon from the state to the United States government.

J. G. Hendricks, Wiley Wright, and Henry Furr, who conducted a series of raids here late yesterday, were taken in custody at Aberdeen, upon order of Assistant District Attorney Sack. Then they were released on bonds of $10,000 each after habeas corpus proceedings had been started on their behalf by Sack.

Sheriff John Williams, who had gone to arrest the three on local warrants, returned empty handed and with an announcement that the government had taken over the case.

Shot Down on Home Farm.

Land, a young giant and possessor of a good reputation, was shot down early last night in a field behind his farm home, 4 miles north of Columbus. He had never before been charged with prohibition law violation, although the agents carried a warrant for him. Several others were arrested earlier by the same raiding party.

Stories of two Negro eye witnesses were revealed today. The only ones present beside the three agents were Bob Rice, tenant of Land's farm, and Dennis Gregory, tenant on the farm of a neighbor.

In a deposition Rice said that as officers approached Land one of them announced who they were and said, "Give me that thing in your belt." It was a pistol, the Negro said.

Rice said an agent held out a hand for the pistol, but instead of surrendering the gun Land stepped backward.

"Then I turned my head," said the Negro, and added that he did not see the two shots fired. "When I looked again, Land was falling and a gun was already on the ground."

Relates Similar Story.

Gregory in his desposition related practically the same testimony. Gregory was with the officers not as an informer, it was learned, but to prevent his giving Land a tip.

Agents took the body of Land to the house and laid it on some quilts they took from a room. They returned to Columbus and reported the slaying. The revenue men were not held last night and went to their headquarters at Aberdeen.

During the day the slaying was the chief topic of conversation and feeling was intense. A coroner's jury took no responsibility, but many unofficially expressed an opinion that Land was shot in the back.

Land was over six feet tall and weighed 235 pounds. Many were the stories of his marksmanship. It was not known whether the federal agents knew he was a crack shot. He had one son.

Federal Agent Slain.

The slaying climaxed a series of events in an intensive prohibition drive in this vicinity, during which H. L. Everett, a government agent, was slain Saturday at Collins, Miss. In Washington special agents said several clues had been uncovered, leading to an early arrest in the Everett case.

Federal agents also were seeking two persons in Michigan tonight on fugitive warrants while a large batch of indictments were returned by the grand jury at Jackson against gulf coast conspirators in an alleged liquor smuggling ring recently uncovered on the gulf coast.

Among those indicted are James W. Kukla of Muskegon, Mich., and Jack Vinkelmulder, alias Jack Miller, of Grand Rapids, Mich., arrested last November when a plane they were occupying and which contained liquor made a forced landing in Mississippi.

KILLED BY FUMES IN GARAGE.

COURT BATTLES PREDICTED OVER CITY SHORTAGE

Expose of Pay Advance System Forecast.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

The whole system of extracting money from the city treasury by means of I. O. U.'s and salary "advances," it appeared yesterday, will be aired in the courts, with the surety companies, former City Treasurer Charles S. Peterson and August B. Singer, and Chief Cashier Earl G. Bingham of the treasurer's office telling the secrets.

CHARLES S. DENEEN (TRIBUNE Photo.)

Some of the facts may be related to the special grand jury before the civil suits are started. City Treasurer James A. Kearns, whose audit exposed the present cash shortage of $40,204, was subpoenaed yesterday by the grand jury.

Others Ready to Testify.

Former Senator Deneen, attorney for Peterson and Singer, said they will be produced for service today. Former Chief Justice Harry Olson of the Municipal court, attorney for Bingham, announced last night that his client is willing to appear before the grand jury. The curtain on this phase of the shortage in the city's strong box will be raised Monday.

Each of the three participating principals in the shortage appeared to be jockeying for an advantage yesterday.

Bingham, who is now looked upon as the key to the situation—he is debited in the recently completed audit with the withdrawal of $36,020 of the total shortage of $40,204—was found at the office of his attorney, former Judge Olson, in room 720 of the Otis building.

Bingham Shows No Worry.

In an hour of conversation he gave little indication of worry, although he had read a printed rumor that part of the shortage is due to speculation on the Board of Trade, where $16,000 was reported to have been lost, and then on the stock exchange, where as much more was said to have been lost.

Both Bingham and his lawyer declined to discuss charges, although Bingham has previously chatted about news developments in municipal affairs.

Bingham, who has been in the treasurer's office for nearly 30 years, is married, lives in Beverly Hills, has a daughter 14 years old, another 12, and a son 9 years old. While working in the treasurer's office he studied law and was admitted to the bar in 1917.

Bingham Offers a Defense.

Bingham, it is stated, has a defense for the $36,020 charged against him in the treasurer's office.

The audit indicates that all of the cash which Bingham withdrew from the treasury was taken while Peterson was treasurer. Lawyers assert that if Bingham does not make good Peterson must.

Peterson yesterday issued a statement reviewing his public service in which he said that he did not owe a dollar to either city or county. This statement said there is a discrepancy in the accounts of one civil service employé.

A Remark from Olson.

In discussing the tangle Attorney Olson said:

"Without reference to this case, when I was chief justice of the Municipal court we had an audit of the accounts in all offices every month. That kept everything straight."

A defense of a surety company to the payment of a shortage of a public official is a lack of reasonable care to keep safe the funds. Neither Attorney Olson nor Bingham would say whether Peterson had an audit of the treasurer's office monthly.

Singer, who was appointed treasurer last January, when Peterson was made city controller, is reported to have said that when he took over the office there were I. O. U.'s totaling $23,000 in the cashier's till.

Attorney Deneen said that Singer's $20,000 debt to the treasury, of which he has paid $17,000, was chiefly for money obtained by other persons. Deneen said that Singer has divested himself of all his property to raise the $17,000. He still owes about $3,200.

Singer claims that he went to Peterson and urged that the illegal paper in the treasurer's office be taken up. He says that he was referred by Peterson to Attorney Thomas Marshall, with whom he also talked, but did not get the paper taken out of the treasury.

$40,000 Redeems Some I. O. U.'s.

Before the election, it has been revealed, eight members of the former city administration raised $40,000 to redeem I. O. U.'s of Peterson which were then in the treasurer's office. At that time the aggregate shortage in the treasurer's office was said to be $109,000. After the $40,000 for Peterson had been placed in the till there still remained a $69,000 shortage, it is charged, when the newly elected city treasurer, Kearns, came into office on April 10. Since then $29,000 has been made good, and several small items were paid yesterday.

Attorney Deneen would not discuss the $40,000 paid for Peterson. He explained that had a political tinge, was not in the present situation, and he had not asked his client about it.

BANDITS WOUND GROCER.

Frank Borsis, a grocer at 4432 South Western avenue, was wounded yesterday by one of three bandits. The shooting occurred when Borsis ran from the rear of the store in response to screams of his wife. The robbers fled empty handed.

CHARGED WITH SLUGGING

Husband Is Factor

Hollywood, Cal., May 8.—[Special.]—Declaring that she was beaten and kicked by Lilyan Tashman, film star, Alona Marlowe, also a film actress, today asked action against Miss Tashman by the city prosecutor's office.

Miss Marlowe told the city prosecutor that she was waiting for a friend in the Fox studio at Westwood Hills last Friday when Edmund Lowe, film actor and husband of Miss Tashman, asked her to come into his dressing room bungalow, "out of the sun." Lowe left immediately, she said, leaving her there alone in the sitting room of the bungalow.

A few minutes later, Miss Marlowe asserts, Miss Tashman entered and, without warning, assaulted her, kicking and beating her until outsiders interfered.

Deputy City Prosecutor F. M. Jack issued instructions for Miss Tashman to appear at the prosecutor's office at 5 o'clock next Monday afternoon to tell her side of the affair.

CERMAK IS TOLD TAX ISSUE NEEDS EXTRA SESSION

Legislators Do Not Hope for Early Action.

Mayor Cermak was told by a group of state senators yesterday that the Illinois general assembly probably will have to meet in special session to thresh out the revenue problems with which it is confronted.

SEWELL AVERY. [Moffett Photo.]

Headed by Senator Earl B. Searcy, a subcommittee of the revenue committee of the upper house was closeted with the mayor for about an hour in an effort to learn what sort of a program he will favor for the relief of the needs of the city, the board o feducation, and other local taxing bodies.

Will Meet Advisory Group.

The mayor did not commit himself to any definite form of legislation and confined himself to a request that the senators meet next Friday afternoon with his advisory committee and such experts as J. Louis Jacobs, Attorney Hayden Bell, and G. O. Fairweather. The legislators conferred with Sewell Avery, chairman of the mayor's committee, and arranged for the conference.

With approximately only seven weeks left of this session, the legislators said they have begun to feel that the progress made with problems of revenue and taxation up to this time does not warrant any substantial hope that those puzzles will be solved before the sine die adjournment on or about June 30.

"I do not wish to quote the governor," said Senator Searcy, "but I am sure he feels as we do that there will have to be at least one special session this year and possibly more if the first one is not completely successful. I know that the governor is thoroughly alarmed over the revenue situation."

"And that is what is worrying me more than anything else," put in Mayor Cermak.

Seek Tax Relief and Revenue.

"Our chief desire in being here," said Senator James J. Barbour of Evanston, "is to see to it that when the Chicago plan is ready that it will provide some relief for the taxpayers including the owners of real estate and that there will be a strong public demand behind it."

Senator Searcy and his associates told the mayor that Chicago and Cook county are not alone in their financial troubles.

Questioned about another Spring field bill in a different field—the Galvin bill to extend the terms of the present ward committeemen to four years, giving them an additional two years despite the impending change in ward lines—Mayor Cermak told his visitors that the measure should be defeated.

"I believe in having the ward committeemen submit themselves to their constituents at the end of their regular terms," he said. "In view of the remapping of the wards this year there are two good reasons for an election next year."

Talks School Issue.

Following a conference with President Lewis E. Myers of the board of education, Mayor Cermak said he was more optimistic than he had been that the wavering controversy between the administration and the board will be ironed out.

"I shall not ask any member of the board for his resignation," he said. "They all know what my position is. What I want to know is whether they will proceed without further delay to remove the unnecessary employés now on the pay roll, obtain better competition in bidding, investigate the purchasing department and extend the city efficiency survey to include the public schools."

ARCHITECT FOR SCHOOLS CUTS 21 FROM PAY ROLL

John C. Christensen, architect for the board of education, yesterday announced the dismissal of sixteen temporary employés and the laying off of five civil service superintendents of construction. He said their positions probably would not be filled.

The construction superintendents who were put back on the waiting list and their monthly salaries are: Nicholas C. Drolenga, $325; Paul J. Messer, $325; William Prendergast, $325; T. P. Stypczynski, $295; and Thomas F. Hunter, $310.

The temporary appointees who were permanently discharged, being without civil service status, are: Joseph L. Kobylanski, $295; Holland Hamilton, $250; John H. Murdock, $270; Arthur E Bond, $270; David Pesetsky, $295; Harold Hastrup, $310; William Bermann, $310; Harry Vodicka, $180; Arthur Siljander, $150; John R. La Thomas, $280; Walter G. Beyer, $250; William R. Baird, $280; William Jahn, $295; P. K. Simpson, $310; H. E. Anderson, $310; and B. H. Perbohner, $295. The latter list comprises designers and draftsman.

G. W. LEHMANN WED SECRETLY IN WAUKEGAN

George W. Lehmann, son of Edward J. Lehmann, former president of the Fair store, married Miss Louise Miles of Chicago, following an elopement to Waukegan at 2 a. m. on May 1, it was learned yesterday. Efforts to reach the young couple or Lehmann's parents were not successful last night and the address of the former Miss Miles could not be obtained. Bride and bridegroom are both 21 years old.

It was learned that the couple first aroused Mrs. Lew A. Hendee, wife of the county clerk at Waukegan, to obtain a license and then awakened Harry Hoyt, justice of the peace, who performed the ceremony. All persons concerned were pledged to secrecy.

In carrying out the elopement, George emulated his elder brother, Edward J. Lehmann Jr., who kept secret his marriage to Mrs. Virginia Peine Waibel at Mount Vernon, Ill., from Feb. 9 until April 30.

School Board Accepts State Quiz Into Charges of Waste

The appointment of a financial expert, by a state senate subcommittee, to investigate charges of extravagance against the board of education was approved by the trustees yesterday.

The investigation was proposed by State Senator A. S. Cuthbertson of Bunker Hill, chairman of the state senate subcommittee which is considering school legislation.

At a hearing of the subcommittee in the school board rooms in the Stueben building yesterday Cuthbertson cited a Supreme court ruling which designates the board of education as a state agency rather than a municipal agency. "We downstate people are the first who should be advised of any fault with this school system in order to rectify such a condition," Cuthbertson said.

Called to Consider Bill.

The senate committee hearing was originally called to discuss a senate bill which would cause 5 days of each school year to be set aside for the holding of teachers' meetings. The board members and Supt. William J. Bogan expressed their disapproval of the bill, saying that 4 hours a year for this purpose is enough.

While there have been rumors of an investigation of school expenditures the trustees had not expected that it would be launched by any state official. Mayor Cermak had asked that his citizens' committee survey of the school system and the trustees had anticipated an inquiry from that quarter.

Cuthbertson made his suggestion at the beginning of the hearing. He presided and was supported by six other senators, members of the committee, only one of whom, F. J. Loughran, represents a Chicago district.

Refers to Charges.

In making his suggestion Senator Cuthbertson said: "We cannot ignore the charges that the taxpayer's money has been wasted in the management of school affairs. I believe this committee is eminently fitted to appraise the situation because its membership has no selfish interests or partisan feelings in connection with the school board affairs of this city."

Trustees James A. Hemingway, chairman of the finance committee, and Trustee H. Wallace Caldwell, a former board president, both of whom are appointees of the old administration, made speeches favoring the senate inquiry and the board voted its approval.

TEACHERS REJECT NOTES

School teachers of Chicago yesterday decided they would not accept tax anticipation warrants in payment of their past due salaries. On the other hand, they announced they were considering the advisability of taking their salary claims to court by filing suits against the board of education.

The decision was reached at a joint meeting of the executive boards of the Men Teachers' union of Chicago and the Federation of Women High School Teachers in their headquarters at 506 South Wabash avenue.

Accept Bankers' Advice.

James A. Meade, president of the men's organization, said the teachers had accepted the advice of the city's leading bankers in declining to accept the tax warrants. Meade said the bankers told him the teachers could not expect the banks to take the warrants after the banks had refused to buy any more of the same warrants from the school board.

In considering salary suits, Meade said the teachers had been advised by the bankers that salary judgments would be acceptable at their face value. The teachers will seek legal advice and confer with the trustees regarding the possibility of friendly suits to test the plan, Meade said.

Committee Is Named.

A committee of five, including Meade and Mrs. Lucie H. Schacht, president of the women's federation, was named to consider the salary suits.

Alderman Wiley W. Mills [37th], recently retained as counsel for the Chicago High School Teachers' association, addressed the annual dinner of the association last night in the Auditorium hotel. He discussed their salary problems and possible remedies. F. T. Wilhelms was elected president of the association.

HUNT MISSING REALTY CAMPAIGN SALES MANAGER

Missing for thirty-six hours, Franklin Gray, 38 years old, sales manager of the First Realty company, 40 North Dearborn street, was being sought by Chicago and Oak Park police last night. His wife, Elsie, with whom he lived at 530 Washington boulevard, Oak Park, reported his disappearance to the Oak Park police Thursday evening.

According to Mrs. Gray her husband left the office of the realty company about 2:30 p. m., Thursday, in his maroon colored sedan, intending to collect about $400 in rents from south side tenants. At the time he was wearing a light gray hat, dark blue suit, and dark overcoat. He is about 5 feet 11 inches tall and weighs 150 pounds.

WINNER PICKED IN U. OF CHICAGO MUSTACHE RACE

A bristling black mustache won the first prize yesterday for Frank Calvin, 7438 Colfax avenue, in the annual mustache race among seniors at the University of Chicago. The race started two weeks ago.

"A man's mustache," commented Herb Peterson, campus barber, in selecting Calvin as the winner. Peterson was the sole judge of the race, and awarded Calvin a shaving mug and prepaid credit for one shave.

The booby prize, plus a ducking, was awarded to James Scheibler, another contestant. His hirsute effort was the weakest, but he erred in adorning his upper lip with a false mustache. The reward was a ducking in Botany pond.

400 IN COUNTY HIGHWAY DEPT. GO WITHOUT PAY

Four hundred employés in the highway department of the county board went unpaid yesterday while the board's financial agents were continuing their search for funds with which to bolster a depleted treasury. The bi-monthly pay roll amounted to about $60,000.

During the day the county commissioners were informed by Michael J. O'Connor, assistant deputy controller, that no more highway pay rolls can be met until the 1931 tax anticipation warrants are sold.

O'Connor also informed the commissioners that the other employés of the county board will receive only one more pay check.

FRANCE GREASES BRIAND'S PATH INTO PRESIDENCY

Gives His Peace Policy Big Vote of Confidence.

BY EGBERT SWENSON.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, May 9.—[Saturday.]—By the overwhelming vote of 430 to 52, the chamber of deputies at 1:30 o'clock this morning expressed confidence in Pierre Laval's cabinet, meaning Aristide Briand, and thereby indorsing his entire foreign policy and indicating that he was not to blame, as foreign minister, for allowing the Austro-German customs union project to materialize. Only the communists and a handful of the extreme right diehards turned thumbs down on the astute foreign minister.

The unprecedented vote means that nothing can now check M. Briand's ride into the presidency on May 13, to succeed President Doumergue, except possibly his own unwillingness to abandon the foreign ministry and its arduous glory. He is expected, however, to announce his candidacy soon.

Condemn Customs Union.

Another motion condemning the proposed customs union was adopted by a unanimous vote of 470. The communists and Socialists abstained from this vote due to some minor provisions contained in the motion. The Socialists voted solidly in favor of another motion which indirectly condemned the proposed union. This means M. Briand will fight the Austro-German project when he goes to Geneva for the league of nations council meeting next week.

But the whole debate was a milk and water affair, strangely contrasting with the bitter outcry against M. Briand immediately following the announcement of the Austro-German project. It was easy to read between the lines that France will finally reconcile herself to the inevitability of the Austro-German union. This attitude was privately admitted by several deputies on the floor of the house during the debate. Not a single heckler suggested anything drastic, or even positive, to prevent the project. M. Briand's suggestion to leave it up to the league of nations prevailed.

Briard Defends Record.

Previous to the vote of confidence M. Briand had made a vigorous defense of his peace policy in a long speech.

"Every step I have taken," he declared, "has been a step toward peace. My policies have made it possible to settle the gravest questions without resort to arms."

He insisted that as a result of his policies the prestige of France had been greatly raised.

"Frenchmen traveling from the ends of the earth," he declared, "report to me that France's prestige has never been so great. France is considered a soldier of peace.

"Hard to Make War."

"Abroad France is more envied than pitied. All those conventions which she has signed and many which she has proposed have done service to her reputation. It is remembered of her that since the war she has not been content to insist on the execution of the treaty of Versailles, which has been both a force and a difficulty. She has helped to her utmost to organize peace and to make it secure.

"Today it is infinitely more difficult to make war than formerly, and surely that is progress. Abroad and in this country, too, it has been welcomed in that way. For my part and in so far as I have contributed to that improved situation I regret nothing.

"Those people are strongest who do not, in an emergency, let their emotions dominate their reason. Those who let themselves go forward impulsively sow panic, which could be prevented."

NEW OPEN TOP COACHES PLACED IN SERVICE HERE

The Chicago Motor Coach company is placing in service an improved one man open top double deck bus. The maintenance shops are turning out the rebuilt buses at the rate of 12 a week. There are now 88 of the improved buses in operation, and there are to be 185.

The remodeled coaches are equipped with balloon tires for the front wheels and high pressure pneumatics for the rear wheels. The lower deck has a clearance of 71 inches from floor to ceiling for head room. This is possible because the coaches do not have inclosed tops and therefore are able to clear low bridges.

A ventilating system, devised after months of study by the company's engineers, supplies 200 cubic feet of air per minute, or 10 cubic feet per passenger. The system prevents the seeping of exhaust gases through the floor.

SPAIN DECREES FREE EDUCATION FOR CHILDREN

Abolishes Compulsory Religious Training.

BY JAY ALLEN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MADRID, May 8.—Religious liberty in the schools, a hopeless dream of liberal minds as long as the rigid ruins of the medieval Spanish church and state stood erect, was quietly decreed tonight by the republic, which sent all that toppling only three weeks ago.

In a baldly worded half page document, the minister of public instruction, Marcelino Domingo, no longer of "his most Catholic majesty and Catholic Spanish nation" put an end to the centuries' old compulsion.

Children in state financed schools need no longer take obligatory religious instruction. If their parents want them to have it, they may get it as in the past. But if the school master does not care to teach it, the child can only procure religious instruction if a priest volunteers his services without pay at certain hours fixed by agreement with the teacher.

Minister Describes Move.

"One of the postulates of the republic is religious liberty," said Minister Domingo, who only a few months ago was a pallid little man with a woolen shawl around his throat in a single room living off a cheap pension, dreaming these things, and conspiring between times.

"With this victory Spain achieves to the moral and civil level of European democracies and those of America, which broke from her and anticipated her conquest of the institutions, which now are ended here by the decree of religious liberty with respect to conscience, child, and teacher.

"The provisional government would not be true to its principles, if it did not rapidly accomplish its duty. It is up to the constituent parliament to decide on the state's structure, the limitation of authority and the nature of instruction, but there is no infringement on authority of parliament in the provisional government decreeing that Spain will cease to be an exception, and that from now on she enjoys absolute liberty of instruction."

Catholic Press Fearful.

This was taken as a sign that the government, which seemed to be abandoning its original intentions of accelerating Spain's progress up through the centuries by decree, is giving ear to the radical element which made that revolution with the cry "we want no republic for the monarchists."

The diehard Catholic press now claims to fear that Minister Domingo will dare go ahead and ban parochial schools, which educate half of young Spain. The minister, however, thus far has only declared a desire to build 50,000 new schools to house the urchins, who now roam the streets.

The reform, which obviously prepares the way for the separation of church and state, soon to come, was anounced by a victorious government.

The scalp of the doughty Cardinal Segura of Toledo, primate of Spain, is already on its belt. Tonight, although a protest has been made to Rome over his latest political outburst, a sport now denied the clergy in Spain, and while it was not known except to a handful, it develops that the primate is already as good as out.

It is learned that possibly he will receive orders to proceed to Rome as early as Monday.

SURVEY REVEALS BIG DECLINE IN PRICE OF FOODS

Reductions Range from 10% to 50%.

about 50 to 60 per cent lower than a year ago and it is apparent that most of this reduction has carried into retail prices to the benefit of the housewife," he said. "The seasonal change in prices is evident in cherries. A month ago the first few boxes reached Chicago and were sold immediately at $1.25 per pound wholesale. Now they are coming in wholesale lots and are selling for about 25 cents a pound wholesale, which, with heavy shipments later, will soon become the retail price."

Early spring vegetables are down a few cents and may be still lower before the season is over. Radishes which sold for 15 cents for two bunches last spring can be bought for 5 cents a bunch. Green onions are selling for the same price.

Reduction in Meats.

While the number of grades and qualities of meats makes a comparison difficult, there is an apparent reduction in all cuts. These are some of the prices noted yesterday, compared with the prices last year:

| | 1931. | 1930. |
|---|---|---|
| Round steak, lb. | .35 | .42-.45 |
| Sirloin, lb. | .46 | .60 |
| Pork roast, lb. | .5-19 | .16-.13 |
| Bacon, ½ lb. pkg. | .15 | .19 |

Tea has remained at approximately the same mark in the last twelve months, although one large group of retail groceries reported a reduction of about 2 cents per pound. Ice cream remains about on the same level, although some companies are shaving a nickel from the price.

ROB FURNITURE STORE.

Three armed men invaded the rooms of the Burley Furniture company at 4042 Madison street yesterday, threatened two men and three girls, and fled with $83. More than eighty patrons were in the upstairs salesrooms at the time, unaware of the holdup.

TREASURE TROVE IS UNEARTHED ON OAK STREET BEACH

The Lincoln park commissioners, who sent a tractor crew to Oak street beach yesterday with orders to scrape away the surplus sand that blows up over the pavement, unwittingly discovered a placer mine and provided a temporary solution for the West Madison street unemployment problem.

All day the lobbies of the Madison street lodging houses were deserted while the normally idle inmates spent the day at the beach, following the path of scrapers, propelled by the tractors. Once the surface was scratched the treasure trove deposited there by countless bathers of last summer came to light.

A girl's lunch money—a youngster's fund for ice cream cones—the day's total yield was $17 in small coins, together with a handful of trinkets, rings, and other jewelry. The West Madison street contingent is expected back this morning.

INDIA TO DEMAND BRITAIN RETURN 6 BILLION 'LOOT'

Bases Sum on 'Tributes' Paid to Crown.

BY JOHN STEELE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, May 8.—The All-India Nationalist congress is preparing to demand from Great Britain six billion dollars which Mahatma Gandhi and his followers claim India was robbed of during the period of British rule. The calculations were made by Prof. K. T. Shah of Bombay university, who remained in England after the round table conference to compile the figures. Prof. Shah, his work done, will return to India in a few days.

Prof. Shah begins with an alleged tribute of £2,000,000 yearly, which was paid by the old East India company to the crown, and he includes £30,000,000 which was paid by the newer to the East India company when India was taken over by the British government.

India Pays for Wars.

He also includes the costs assessed against India for wars in China, Burma, Afghanistan, Persia, Cape of Good Hope, Manila, Mauritius, and, in fact, every little scrap in which Indian troops were used, as well as a little item borne by the India office in 1843, when the sultan of Turkey was entertained in England and the expense was shared by the foreign office and India.

Prof. Shah based his calculations on three principles: first, where the error was that of principle, either deliberately or unconsciously adopted to lay upon India burdens properly belonging to the empire; second, where undue preference was shown British trade, such as discrimination in rates on railroads, tariffs, and exchange policy; third, the damage caused by the extravagance or administrative mismanagement such as the building of the new capital city of New Delhi and the Bombay back bay scheme.

GANDHI TO SEE VICEROY

BY WILLIAM SHIRER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SIMLA, India, May 8.—A fleet of runners went hooding over the Himalayan hills tonight to spread the tidings that Mahatma Gandi, the Nationalist leader, was coming to town on Wednesday to see Viceroy Lord Willingdon.

It is just ten years since the "holy man" last came to this bureaucratic capital to see Lord Reading, who was then viceroy. At that time the natives flocked over the hills and mountains to get a glimpse of him by the thousands. They are expected back again next week.

While ostensibly Gandhi's main purpose for coming here is to discuss whether the Delhi peace pact has been carried out by both sides, the real reason is to let the government know whether he intends going to London for the second round-table conference. Crafty strategist that he is, Gandhi has kept Simla and London in the dark.

Bitter criticism from all shades of Indian opinion during the last fortnight has forced the government to speed up its plans for the London conference, but before the date is announced London wants the definite assurance that the "holy man" will participate.

Gandhi has promised to give his word next week and his decision rests on the question whether the British will be prepared to let him open up the entire question of safeguards. If not, then Gandhi has plainly indicated that a London trip would be a waste of time, since the safeguards which were stipulated at the last conference were not acceptable to the All-India Nationalist congress.

WEDS SECRETLY

Dispatches from Honolulu yesterday confirmed reports of the marriage on April 11 of Dana McCutcheon Dawes, adopted son of Ambassador Charles G. Dawes, and Miss Eleanor Dillingham of Honolulu in Belchertown, Mass. They are spending their honeymoon in Honolulu, where they arrived Thursday on the steamer Maiolo. Young Dawes is 19 years old and his bride is 18, according to the dispatches.

Rufus C. Dawes, brother of Ambassador Dawes, reached in his office yesterday, said that he felt sure the facts contained in the dispatches were correct, as the girl's parents must have made the announcement of the marriage. They are Mr. and Mrs. Frank Thompson Dillingham and reside in Honolulu. The bride was a sophomore at Mount Holyoke college. Dawes was a freshman at Williams college.

GIRL HE FOUGHT FOR TURNS ON 2 GUN CROWLEY

Indicted for Murder on Her Story.

New York, May 8.—[Special.]—"Two Gun" Francis Crowley, the diminutive killer who was captured yesterday in a pitched battle with police, got a sharp taste today of the law he professed to defy.

Two grand juries in the Bronx and Nassau counties acted without delay in the cases of Crowley and Rudolph Duringer, his confederate. Duringer and Crowley's girl, Helen Walsh, were captured with the cocky little killer.

Duringer was indicted in the Bronx for first degree murder a few hours after he stood in the police lineup and calmly admitted that he killed Virginia Brannen, the dime-a-dance girl whose body was found ten days ago in a vacant lot in Yonkers. Duringer said he killed because he was "jealous." He was held without bail.

Crowley Indicted, Too.

An hour or so later, while Crowley still lay in Bellevue with three bullet wounds in his legs and arm, the Nassau county grand jury had returned a first degree murder indictment charging him with the slaying Tuesday night of Policeman Frederick Hirsch in "Black Shirt lane," near North Merrick, L. I.

Plans were made to put both men on trial immediately.

Crowley was removed from Bellevue and taken to Mineola late this afternoon.

The Walsh girl, who is 16 and who vows that she loves Crowley, was the principal witness against him before the grand jury. She was at the young gunman's side when he pumped ten bullets into Patrolman Hirsch after the officer had interrupted their petting party in the darkened lane.

The Girl Goes Free.

District Attorney Edwards said the girl will not be indicted, nor will she be held as a material witness. At the same time he said that she had promised to tell the "whole story" of her relations with Crowley and what she knows of him.

It was revealed that the Walsh girl was the indirect cause of Crowley's capture. He had thrown over another sweetheart for Helen and the jilted one promptly sent the detectives a tip as to where, when, and how Crowley might be taken.

MOB TIJUANA MAYOR; AID IS SLAIN; MARTIAL LAW PUT IN EFFECT

San Diego, Cal., May 8.—(AP)—Tia Juana, Mexican border resort town noted for its gambling games, was under martial law tonight following the death of Roque Sabida Quijano, who was shot when political enemies attacked Mayor Miquel Angel Menendez and his bodyguard last night.

Quijano, secretary to the mayor, died here today from wounds which Tia Juana labor leaders said were inflicted by the mayor during the attack by seven men. They said the mayor drew his gun and it was discharged during the struggle.

The assault was made after Mayor Menendez addressed a meeting at the Labor temple. Jose Ricardi, aviator, and Dr. L. Y. Robert, in the party, were severely beaten. The mayor was uninjured.

INDIAN PRINCESS WINS $5,000,000 ESTATE IN COURT

LONDON, May 8.—(AP)—An Indian princess today was awarded an estate valued at more than $5,000,000 under a decision of the pudicial committee of the privy council.

She is Ranee Chatra Kumari Devi, the only one living of her husband's four wives. The rajah died childless in 1912, but Prince Mohan Kikram Shah claimed the estate on the ground that the rajah had adopted him as his son.

The Indian courts supported his claim, but the judicial committee reversed the decision.

Salem, Mass., May 8.—[Special.]—Ernest E. Cushing, 35 year old hired man, who eloped with his employer's 16 year old daughter last October, today was given the legal status of a married bachelor. # FIND NO REVOLT AT CHESTER AND MENARD PRISONS

Legislators Praise Heads of Both Institutions.

BY PERCY WOOD.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
Menard, Ill., May 8.—[Special.]—Two penal institutions conducted in such a manner as to bring high praise from the visitors were inspected today by the prison committee of the Illinois house of representatives. The southern Illinois penitentiary and the Chester State hospital, an institution for the criminally insane were toured from top to bottom.

JAMES WHITE.

The complete absence of the unrest so prevalent among Joliet and Stateville convicts was the more frequent comment made by the legislators as they accompanied Warden James A. White about his prison. Here there were no catcalls, boos, and the shaking of bars that marked the attitude of the inmates in the northern prisons.

Find No Open Rancor.

They went about their work in the dozen industries in which they are engaged in an orderly fashion and their individual complaints directed against the state board of pardons and paroles for their long "sittings" given quietly when asked for and without open rancor. The Joliet prisoners were bitterly hostile toward the board. There are 2,310 convicts here and all save about 100 cripples and the aged are given some work to do each day.

This policy has meant that Warden White has had to distribute the work equally not all the men working continually but the quarry, the clothes shops, the brick yard, the knitting factory, and the bakery are hives of industry during laboring hours. Having their hand in something keeps the men contented and prevents brooding, the warden says. This is not to say that the prison has everything it needs in the way of equipment and machines on the manufacturing side.

Warden [illegible] at Joliet attributed some of the disturbances there to the fact that the prisoners were locked in their cells all but a small time because the working facilities are so limited.

Blasting Crumbles Walls.

At Menard when Warden White obtained a $300,000 appropriation for a new cell block he put his inmates to work on it and its huge structure now rears a tremendous bulk against the quarry cliffs, behind it the product of "home" labor. It will be finished in the fall with fast work and will do much to relieve overcrowding.

The rear wall behind the quarry sides has been weakened by blasting and began to crumble a few days ago. It was immediately necessary to erect a tall wooden stockade which now serves as a barrier, but a $16,000 appropriation for a new wall is urgent, the warden told his visitors. If this were granted and he is allowed $50,000 to build an addition to his prison hospital, Mr. White believes he can cope with his situation here for the next two years.

The correctional attitude at this prison does not extend often to handcuffing incorrigibles to their cell doors, the practice in other institutions. Warden White has been at Menard six years during his two terms, and in that period he has only found it necessary to resort to this punishment on two occasions.

House 450 Dangerous Lunatics.

Overlooking the vast prison enclosure from the top of the cliffs is the hospital superintended by Dr. Frank A. Stubblefield for the last twenty years. There are 450 dangerous lunatics under his charge now, more than he ever has had since he has been head of this "one man" institution.

The hospital was built for 410 patients, but the overcrowding is far worse than the slight difference in figures might indicate, for one building which houses the administration offices and the less violent patients is antiquated and worse, says the doctor—a fire trap.

To renovate this building as he now is renovating another, Dr. Stubblefield needs $65,000, and the assurance given him by the visiting party—notably Representative Harry M. McCaskern, Rock Island, Gordon W. Childers, Normal, Robert Whitely, Carlinville, M. E. Bray, Litchfield, and M. L. Igoe, Chicago—was that they would make every effort to provide it for him in the budget of the department of public welfare.

CHARGE FLORIDA GANG KIDNAPED, FLOGGED FOR FEE

Jurors Indict 6 Men and Woman as Whippers.

Clearwater, Fla., May 8.—(AP)—Six men and a woman were under arrest tonight on indictments returned by the Pinellas county grand jury today charging kidnaping in the abduction and whipping of R. W. Oxford, St. Petersburg, Fla., last Feb. 22.

Those indicted are Paul Nolen, St. Petersburg grocer; B. B. Bachelder, St. Petersburg carpenter; Robert Letsinger, proprietor of a St. Petersburg automobile wrecking yard; Wilbur C. Mills, Tampa salesman; Benny Pardo and Sam Cicarello, Tampa mechanics, and Mrs. Alice Henderson Woods of Tampa. The woman was charged with being a decoy for the gang that abducted Oxford.

Nolen, Bachelder, and Letsinger, who were arrested late today, pleaded not guilty and were released on $3,000 bond each. The other four, who previously had ben arrested, notified the court they would be present next Tuesday when the cases are to be set for trial. Cicarello, Pardo, and Mills are under $6,000 bond each, while Mrs. Wood is under $500 bond.

Fail to Present Evidence.

Nolen, Bachelder and Letsinger were arrested some time ago and charged with employing the gang that whipped Oxford. They subsequently were released at a preliminary hearing before Justice Casey Thigpen of St. Petersburg because the state failed to introduce evidence.

Mills previously had been charged with being one of the gang that whipped Oxford. He had been arrested also as a member of a gang that flogged H. R. Jamison of Tarpon Springs, July 9, 1929, but charges in the latter case were dropped at a recent preliminary hearing.

The flogging of Oxford and subsequent development, which authorities said "indicated the existence of a gang which operated in a business-like fashion, whipping any one pointed out upon the payment of a sufficient sum," have been under investigation by Pinellas county and St. Petersburg officers for months.

The grand jury, which was assisted in its investigation by Acting State's Attorney Dewey A. Dye of Bradenton, indicated it would investigate the slaying last December of Dr. Archie McCallister of Tarpon Springs. Dr. McCallister was shot by an unidentified assailant, who escaped.

ASKED TO ALTER BANK REPORT, AUDITOR SAYS AT TRIAL OF BANKER

Asheville, N. C., May 8.—(AP)—A defense witness admitted today at the trial of three Asheville bankers he had gone to a state's witness, and asked him to "help out" one of the defendants.

In the trial Wallace D. Davis, president of the closed Central Bank and Trust company; C. N. Brown and Dr. J. A. Sinclair, directors, are charged with making false reports of the bank's condition.

After William McCants, auditor for the bank, had testified Davis instructed him to alter the report, the defense placed R. Vance Brown, assistant to McCants, on the stand to contradict some of McCants' testimony.

WOMAN BROKER IS SENTENCED TO ONE TO 10 YEARS

Mrs. Hilda Schroeder, 45 years old, mother of two children, was sentenced to 1 to 10 years in the new women's penitentiary at Dwight, Ill., yesterday by Judge Charles A. Williams of the Criminal court, after he had overruled her motion for a new trial on charges of embezzlement. She then entered a plea of guilty to an additional charge of conspiracy and was sentenced to 1 to 5 years on this charge. The sentences will run concurrently.

John M. Naghten, her business partner in the defunct bond and mortgage company, which had offices at 10 North Clark street, was sentenced to similar terms. They were found guilty several weeks ago on charges of embezzling $4,200 from John Ouska, a real estate man.

Mrs. Rose K. Rotsted, 837 Ainslie street, appeared as the complaining witness in the conspiracy case. She charged that they swindled her out of $333,000 in seven years by juggling mortgages. In her testimony she said, "They're crooks, that's what they are."

BISHOP OUSTED AS HERETIC ASKS REINSTATEMENT

Galion, O., May 8.—(AP)—The Rev. William Montgomery Brown, who was ousted from the house of bishops of the Episcopal church following a trial for heresy seven years ago, announced here today he would seek reinstatement next October.

Bishop Brown, now 76, last night supplied to a group of hunger marchers on their way to Columbus from several Ohio cities. Addressing them he said that economic ills could be relieved only by communism.

Bishop Brown, who was head of the diocese of Arkansas, was convicted by a jury of twelve Episcopal bishops, because of his views on evolution.

GERMAN STORMS TAKE 7 LIVES; CITIES FLOODED

FRANKFORT-ON-MAIN, Germany, May 8.—(AP)—The belated coming of spring has brought a series of unprecedented storms and floods to Germany, taking at least seven lives. The water ruined crops, inundated villages and cities, and washed out roads, railway tracks and bridges.

Southwest Germany was hit the hardest. The Main, Neckar, and Fils rivers and their tributaries have overflowed their banks, causing a shutdown of factories and schools. Residents of Bruchsal, near Karlsruhe, are using boats and the city is without gas or light.

A prolonged cloudburst over Westphalia last night washed out crops and drowned livestock. Another struck Hamburg this morning and flooded cellars. Torrential rains swelled the Bavarian mountain springs, causing lowland inundations and numerous landslides.

CAIRO GUARDED BY TROOPS; FEAR POLITICAL RIOTS

CAIRO, Egypt, May 8.—(AP)—Threats of Wafdist, or Nationalist, demonstrations in their election boycott campaign caused the government to take extraordinary military precautions today particularly in the neighborhood of the palace.

Egyptian lancers patrol the city while traffic was barred in the streets around the palace. Wire entanglements were erected at some points and strong police forces were on patrol. The Wafdists had summoned a "national" congress comprising former premiers and former deputies and senators for today, but the government banned the meeting.

The authorities, however, were of the opinion that the demonstrators might make an attempt to hold the meeting nevertheless, and all possible places of assembly were watched closely.

'AVARICE' WARNING LEADS TO REDUCED CONVERSE ALIMONY

New York, May 8.—(AP)—Supreme Court Justice John Ford, in a separation hearing involving the Converse M. Converses, suggested today to Mrs. Marion Converse "not to be avaricious" in the matter of alimony.

Converse, grandson of the late Edward C. Converse, steel man and Bankers' Trust company founder, had offered Mrs. Converse $600 a month. Her attorneys said her client regarded the sum as too small.

The Converses were divorced in Reno and Converse since has remarried, her counsel said. After a conference of counsel, $8,500 a year was agreed upon.

ITALY TO DRAFT MEN, WOMEN AND INDUSTRY FOR WAR

Everybody Must Take a Part in Some Way.

BY DAVID DARRAH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME, May 8.—Complete mobilization in Italy in time of war is provided for in a bill presented to the chamber of deputies today by Gen. Pietro Gazzera, minister of war. It provides for compulsory service by all civilians of both sexes under the age of 70 and over 14, and also for service by all industries and organizations, whether public or private.

The bill, which has 54 articles, completes the recent provisions for unifying the command and coördinating all factors, civil, industrial and military, in war time. The bill has already passed the council of ministers and the supreme war council.

Everybody to Serve.

The aim of the bill is to put all citizens, of both sexes, as well as all factors of production, at the disposal of the authorities for winning a war. Those who cannot serve in the army may aid it in resisting the enemy, first by lending their moral, intellectual and material activities; second by reducing expenditure and consumption; third by abstaining from any act that might weaken the country's resistance, and fourth by implicit obedience.

In each commune of the country there will be organized what is to be called a committee of local resistance, presided over by the podesta of the commune. This committee will have power of directing local war measures, and may summon any and every one to give any information it wants, besides providing and even commandeering labor and personal services. This committee may dispose of the activities of both men and women at any place and in any manner it is deemed necessary. The local authorities may also take over any organization of a productive factor required for the successful prosecution of a war.

Court Martial for Shirkers.

All those civilly mobilized in this way are to be subject to the strictest discipline, and if they absent themselves from work for more than five days they will be considered military deserters and tried by a military court. All those belonging to the administration of factories, or war material production, are to be under penal military jurisdiction, and punished according to military law the same as men in active service.

The chamber of deputies today also received a bill, introduced by Premier Mussolini, providing for continuing the special military tribunal for the defense of the state for another five years. This tribunal was set up five years ago after an attempt on Premier Mussolini's life at Bologna.

Refers to Frontier Peril.

The bill states that while the internal conditions in Italy have improved so that the tribunal does not have to function much in that respect, yet the activities of the anti-Fascists and the deplorable conditions along the frontiers, where there is an allogeneous population plotting against the state and the lives of its rulers, make it advisable to keep the military tribunal still in operation.

ANGERS ENGLAND

IRENE BORDONI.

Philadelphia, Pa., May 8.—[Special.]—A letter from Frederick Watson, British consul general in Philadelphia, to the Rev. Dr. Frederic Poole, a member of the board of theatrical control and usually known as the city's "theater censor," has led to the revision of a song entitled "I Am the Queen of England" which burlesques the British royal family in Irene Bordoni's new show, "One More Night," appearing at the Forrest theater here.

References to England have been changed to read "Greenland." The phrase "Fool Britannia, scram, scram, scram," was made "Here's the censor, scram, scram," and several similar revisions were made by Galen Bogue, the producer.

Dr. Poole announced that the revised version was satisfactory both to himself and to the British consulate, and that it was a "closed incident."

New Zealanders in Panic; Earth Rocks Through Night

WELLINGTON, New Zealand, May 8.—(AP)—Repeated earthshocks were experienced during the night near Gisborne. Residents were panic stricken and rushed into the open. More than one hundred shocks were felt in the township of Tiniroto and many families camped in the streets. There were several severe tremors at Wairoa, where some buildings were damaged.

HELD AS ROBBERY SUSPECTS.

John Slattery, 40 years old, 814 West 55th street, and William Blake, 27, of 437 West 67th street, were arrested by police yesterday on suspicion of having robbed two milk wagon drivers.

CHAMBER VOTE ON WAR DEBTS, TARIFF, LOOMS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., May 8.—[Special.]—The United States, it became apparent today, will emerge from tomorrow's conclusion of the congress of the International Chamber of Commerce second best in a contest of strategy and hush-hush diplomacy reminiscent of a European peace conference rather than a gathering of business men.

It was learned on good authority today that the delegates of foreign nations have overridden American objections and that the resolutions to be adopted at tomorrow's final meeting will favor a study by the governments involved of the war debts and reparations looking to revision and the lowering and removal of tariff barriers. They will also hope for a reduction of armaments.

Today's formal program was carried on in an undertone of whispering, buzzing about, and evasive answers that would have done justice to another Versailles conference. And, like the peace negotiations of twelve years ago, the Washington meeting of the world's business leaders developed its own Big Five.

Five Leaders Confer.

These were the leaders of the important delegations: Silas H. Strawn of Chicago, the United States; Sir Arthur Balfour, Great Britain; Eugene W. R. Masson, France; Abraham Frowein, Germany, and Albert Pierelli, Italy.

It was they, as an unofficial committee, who finally reached an agreement on the most important and most controversial issues of war debts, reparations, and disarmament. It was they who argued it out among themselves, the United States in the end giving in on the matter of including debts and reparations in the resolution. Disarmament was finally included, much against the will of Great Britain, France, and Italy, out of respect to the sentiments which President Hoover expressed in his speech opening the convention.

It was the five national leaders who convinced their delegations that such an expression of opinion would have to be adopted and then laid their agenda before the official resolutions committee with something like a take it or leave it message.

Soft Phrases Planned.

Naturally, it was explained, the resolution will be phrased as innocuously as possible. War debts, it is understood, will be referred to as political debts, and military expenditures will probably become something like expenditures for uneconomic purposes.

There was little need to argue concerning tariff reduction. France was reported somewhat reluctant, but it is generally known that many American delegates have been restrained with difficulty from coming out in the open and siding with foreign delegations other than France in a clamor for a lowering of the tariff schedules, particularly those of the United States.

All in all, Great Britain and Germany will come out of the conference with a major portion of victory. With everything to gain by a revision of war debts and reparations and a reduction of the tariff, and minimum military expenditures already, Germany in particular is the winner.

Tariff Under Attack.

It was on the tariff front that Europe launched its main attack against the United States today with Dr. W. H. Coates, delegate from Great Britain's Imperial Chemical Industries Ltd., pointing the way.

"Taxes on goods raise prices," he told his American listeners. "Tariffs are taxes on goods. So tariffs raise prices. If you doubt it stay three weeks in a tariff country and then three weeks in free trade Britain. Where we pay five dollars you pay ten. The article is the same. The difference is the tax—the tariff tax. And the tax does not go to the treasury. It is collected by one class of the people from another class. When efficiency rules very high exports are natural. The rest of the world wants to benefit by that efficiency. It wants American cars. They are so good. But we shall shut them out if you will not take the products of our efficiency, whatever be their form or whatever their nationality."

He concluded by bringing in the international debts.

"These debts," he said, "can only be satisfied by the transfer of physical goods or services across international boundaries. When tariffs exclude goods they prevent payment of international debts of all kinds."

URGE ILLINOIS CASH IN ON ITS MINERAL RICHES

Underground Wealth Displayed at Rally.

Carbondale, Ill., May 8.—[Special.]—A bright future for Illinois mineral industries was predicted by Illinois business men from all parts of the state attending a mineral industries conference here today, held under the Illinois Chamber of Commerce and the Illinois State Geological survey.

JOSEPH D. ZOOK.

The purpose of the conference was to enlighten citizens of Illinois as to the mineral wealth in the state and to attract capital to southern Illinois for the establishment of new industries. There was a display in the exhibit room of polished marble cut from the rough rock deposits near Thebes. It was pointed out that although rich deposits of marble may be found all the way from Thebes along the Mississippi river bluffs almost to St. Louis, it has never been quarried.

An Invaluable Heritage.

Facts cited by the Illinois State Geological survey revealed that the value of Illinois annual mineral output exceeds by 2.5 times the value of the gold and silver output of the United States, including Alaska. It was pointed out by Charles C. Whittier, a consulting engineer of Chicago, that front rank could be attained by further scientific research, education, engineering, management and distribution.

Mr. Whittier said downstate Illinois should be turned from an agricultural into a manufacturing area in order to take business advantage of its natural raw minerals, and its advantages in fuel, power, rail and water transportation.

Dean Thompson Talks.

Dean Charles M. Thompson of the college of commerce, University of Illinois, said search must be made for new minerals and new deposits of old minerals, while at the same time new uses for the minerals must be found if this state is to prosper from them.

That the coal industry in Illinois is headed for better days was the opinion by Joseph D. Zook, president of the Illinois Coal Operators' association. Science, he said, would lead the way by finding new uses for the product. Coal derivatives brought about by scientific research are already playing an important part in chemistry, he said.

1 MISSING, 1 HURT AS TANKER CREW WINS OVER BLAZE AT SEA

New York, May 8.—[Special.]—One man was reported missing and another injured tonight in a fire which started on the 5,030 ton oil tanker Ruth Kellogg late this afternoon as she was steaming north 250 miles south of Cape Hatteras.

The owners, the Kellogg Steamship corporation, were advised, however, that the blaze had been brought under control this evening and the tanker was proceeding on her course for New York.

An S O S from the burning ship was picked up by the Radiomarine corporation at 6:22 p. m. and three minutes later came the word that the Standard Oil tanker John D. Archbold was standing by. The message to the steamship company reporting the fire under control said that the injured man had been transferred to the John D. Archbold.

U. S. PLANS TEST OF GRAPE JUICE SALES' LEGALITY

Kansas City, Mo., May 8.—(AP)—The Ukiah Grape Products corporation of New York was charged with violation of the federal prohibition act today in proceedings said at the district attorney's office to be designed to test the legality of the sale of grape concentrate.

Two counts filed against the corporation charge the sale of ten gallons of unfermented grape concentrate, "designed and intended for the manufacture of liquor," and the sale of ten gallons of unfermented grape concentrate to persons not having a license to manufacture vinegar.

Albert E. Brunette, former manager of the Kansas City branch of the corporation, faces trial May 18 on a charge of selling wine. Thomas J. Layson, assistant district attorney, said the corporation would be subject to fine if found guilty.

BERENGARIA ON BAR FOR HOURS; TUGS FREE HER

New York, May 8.—(AP)—The liner Berengaria was warped in at her pier in the North river late today, after having been aground in a fog four and a half hours in Gravesend bay. J. P. Morgan and his daughter, Mrs. George Nichols, were among the 468 passengers on the big ship.

Seven tugs had hauled the third largest vessel afloat, in point of tonnage, off the shoal, and some of them convoyed her up the river.

Those on board were at no time in danger. In the first cabins were Mr. and Mrs. Amory Houghton, son and daughter-in-law of Alanson B. Houghton, former American ambassador to Germany and Great Britain, and Mrs. F. H. Sterling, whose husband is American minister to the Irish Free State.

The Berengaria went aground at a point where her master and pilot had expected to find 40 feet of water, but instead found only 25. Surveyers found the ship had suffered no damage.

RAIL EXECUTIVES SEEK TO BOOST RATE SCHEDULES

Order Study in Effort to End Depression.

Heads of fifty railroads met here yesterday and took action which they believe will cut the vicious circle of business depression and lead toward recovery of all industry.

DANIEL WILLARD.

They adopted a resolution in the name of their organization, the Association of Railway Executives, instructing all rate groups throughout the country to make an immediate study to determine how the entire railway rate structure may be altered to provide needed additional revenue for the railroads.

This action was taken after the group had "recognized the emergency which exists as to the credit and income of the railroads."

Meet Behind Closed Doors.

The meeting was held behind closed doors at the Blackstone hotel and lasted until after 6 o'clock.

Those who attended the session declared that the executives exhibited a marked unanimity of purpose.

The rate survey, according to expectations, will be completed within the next month. Then the rail heads will confer again before presenting their case to the interstate commerce commission.

Not since 1920 has there been a general alteration of the railway freight structure. Speakers at yesterday's session pointed out that after the increase of 40 per cent in freight rates ten years ago there was a continous seesawing of rates, which brought the rate raise down to 25 per cent, and that since that time persistent whittling here and there has dissipated most of the increase. The statement was made that of the 6,000 rate revisions in the last decade 5,000 were revisions downward.

No attempt will be made to disturb present fixed differentials or change the channels of trade, it was stated.

Means Boost in Rates.

The word "increase" was studiously avoided, but the general understanding was that in the aggregate the result will be a boosting of freight rates if the present intention is carried out.

Rail revenues in 1930 were $365,000,000 less than they would have been had the 40 per cent increase of 1920 been maintained, it was stated. The estimate was made that reductions since 1926 had cost the railroads a total of $2,000,000,000.

Something, the presidents agreed, will have to be done. Either income must be increased or expenses curtailed.

Face Cut in Expenses.

If income is not increased, the executives said, the ax will have to continue to fall on the expense account. Expenses are principally four—interest, which can't be cut; taxes, which are fixed; supplies, already cut to the bone, and wages.

On the subject of wages the executives were of one mind. It was agreed that wages should not be tampered with until all other possible solutions have been tried and found wanting.

"Nobody would talk wage reductions," said one who attended the meeting. "It was the opinion of all that wage cutting would simply continue the vicious circle. Twenty per cent of labor in the United States is directly or indirectly dependent upon the railroads.

Find Industries Favorable.

"The decision to look upward instead of downward is not the impulse of the moment. This matter of rate revision has been on the fire for some time. Some of the larger industries have been sounded out and have indicated that their attitude would be favorable."

To justify their move for a general revision of the rate structure the railroads point to their record of earnings in 1930. The aggregate income of all roads last year, they said, was 2½ per cent on the total investment. The government has set up 5¾ per cent as a "fair return." Therefore, they reason that something must be done to fatten the income account.

Increased revenues, according to their reasoning, would stimulate business as a whole by greatly enlarging the purchasing power of all railroads.

Small Difference in Rates.

"The raise in freight rates ten years ago helped us out of the depression in 1921," said one executive. "We believe that an adjustment now will have a similar effect. It should not have a deterrent effect, because any increases that may result will be spread out thin. In 1920, when the rates went up 25 per cent, the difference in the cost of shipping a pair of shoes to St. Louis was only one-half cent. Some definitely constructive step is needed to lead us out of the present depression. We believe that we are on the right track."

Rates, if altered, will not all be raised. In the south they will probably be lowered, if the plan goes through, to enable Southern lines to get back some of the cotton shipments that have gone increasingly to motor trucks. Likewise in the southwest reductions are anticipated to enable the railroads to compete with pipe lines.

Willard Holds Resolution.

The resolution was not immediately given out for publication. It was entrusted to a "literary committee" headed by President Daniel Willard of the Baltimore and Ohio to be polished.

The reference to the "emergency which exists as to credit and income of the railroads" mentioned in the original draft touches a vital point.

The executives had in mind the two billions in railroad bonds in the hands of insurance companies and the other billion held by savings banks in trust funds on which interest must be earned one and a half times to keep them in good standing. Lower revenues cut into the market for rail bonds.

See $400,000 Increase.

Although reference to "increase" was carefully sidestepped, an estimate was made that "if the proposed revision should result in a 10 per cent boost in railway revenues," some $400,000,000 would be added to gross income, of which around $160,000,000 would go to labor by making possible the return to work of men now laid off and necessary improvements temporarily shelved."

The rest would go to purchase supplies and equipment.

A spokesman for the railway executives said the matter of a reduction in the costs of railroad valuation accounting was also taken up. An attempt, he said, will be made to trim these costs substantially. They have amounted to $150,000,000 thus far, the railroads having paid $130,000,000 and the interstate commerce commission $20,000,000.

Among the rail heads present at the meeting were H. R. Scandrett of Milwaukee, Fred W. Sargent of the Chicago and North Western, F. E. Williamson of the C., B. & Q., L. A. Downs of the Illinois Central, J. J. Pelley, New York, New Haven and Hartford; C. R. Gray, Union Pacific; W. B. Storey, Santa Fé; Hale Holden, Southern Pacific; P. E. Crowley, New York Central, and John J. Bernet, Chesapeake and Ohio.

Aishton Presides at Meeting.

R. H. Aishton, chairman of the executive committee of the Association of Railway Executives and president of the American Railway association, presided.

Rufus Dawes, guest at the noon meeting, outlined the progress already made in preparation for the Century of Progress celebration in 1933. The railroad heads took under consideration the question of their participation in the affair.

PENNSY TO FIGHT AIRPLANES WITH HIGH SPEED TRAIN

Prepares to Go 100 Miles an Hour.

Washington, D. C., May 9.—[Special.]—The Pennsylvania railroad plans to meet airplane competition between Washington and New York, than present equipment allows.

It was learned here today, by providing a three and one-half hour passenger service between these cities which will be quieter and more comfortable

This project, which will cut one hour off the present running time of the fastest trains, was described as part of the $175,000,000 electrification and reconstruction program for the entire Pennsylvania system recently announced by its president, W. W. Atterbury. Originally contemplated as a four year program, it is now planned to complete the work in two years.

Feels Competition Keenly.

At present, it was pointed out, about 5,000 passengers are traveling monthly between Washington and New York by airplane. The Ludington line operates an hourly schedule between Hoover field here and the Newark airport, charging less than the railroad rates with Pullman fares. The trip by air takes about two hours, with 40 minutes added for bus transportation to the New York terminal.

To bring its running time down to 3½ hours, the Pennsylvania will increase the speed of its passenger trains from the 45 miles to 65 miles an hour. Its new equipment is understood to be capable of permitting speeds close to 100 miles an hour.

The first step in the New York-Washington project, it is understood, will be the replacement of 130 pound rails with rails weighing 152 pounds to the yard, the heaviest ever used.

Permit 100 Mile Speed.

The new rails will be able to take 100,000 pound axle loads at 100 miles an hour, and with the aid of a new type of splice bar, providing resiliency at the joints, will reduce noise and vibration, adding to comfort.

Most of the railroad's revenues come from freight service, and this, too, has been showing the effects of airplane and bus and truck competition. To meet this, it is understood the Pennsylvania is planning to speed up its freight service. Within the last two weeks, in fact, it has put into the Baltimore, Philadelphia, and Boston service what it claims is the fastest "freight flyer" ever operated.

ELECTRIFICATION HEARINGS WILL START MONDAY

House Group to Quiz City Officials.

Proposed legislation to compel the railroads entering Chicago to electrify their terminals will be the subject of the first of a series of public hearings to be held in the county building on Monday by a subcommittee of the public utilities committee of the Illinois house of representatives.

Representative William G. Thon of Chicago, chairman of the subcommittee, announced yesterday that he has invited a half dozen officials to testify at the meeting, among them Health Commissioner Bundesen, Commissioner of Public Works Sprague, Ald. Oscar F. Nelson [46th], chairman of the council railway terminals committee, and Frank A. Chambers, deputy in charge of the department of smoke abatement.

Bill Requires Electrification.

Mr. Thon's subcommittee has under consideration house bill 5, introduced by Representative Harris B. Gaines of Chicago. The bill provides that all railroads within the city limits must electrify their lines and terminals before January, 1935, unless given an extension of time by the Illinois commerce commission.

The Gaines bill was introduced at the 1929 session of the legislature. After several committee hearings at which spokesmen for the railroads attacked it the house approved the appointment of a commission to study the question. This action, however, was nullified when the senate failed to act on the measure.

Representative Thon said he believed some sort of electrification legislation has a better chance for passage at this session of the legislature.

Calls Conditions Favorable.

"With the World's Fair just ahead there is a stronger public demand for abatement of the smoke nuisance," he said. "The river straightening has made it possible for the railroads south of the loop to get started on a new unified terminal which must be electrified. The new city administration has indicated that it is ready to push ahead on terminal development and the state should do its full share."

The hearing Monday will be held at 10 a. m. in room 237 at the county building.

She was their rich uncle's mistress!

GINA was a prima donna, but she had social ambitions. Her jazz Beethoven couldn't help her to realize them, neither could her wealthy but aged "protector". But he died and left her his millions, much to the despair of his indignant nieces. They had something that Gina lacked—position—and out of the bargain they struck developed the extraordinary series of events chronicled in Strange Capers. A highly sophisticated extravaganza of post-war Europe's smart Bohemia, by the author of American Beauty.

JOHN—the black sheep, the prodigal son, who came from Paris, home to Iowa, with a song on his lips and a cynical hatred of conventions in his heart—

Dreiser Tells Life Story in Frank Fashion

He's Hero and Mother Is His Heroine.

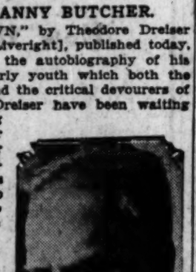
BY FANNY BUTCHER.

"DAWN," by Theodore Dreiser [Liveright], published today, is the autobiography of his early youth which both the devotees and the critical devourers of Theodore Dreiser have been waiting for so long that despair of its ever being published was beginning to seep into the public interest.



THEODORE DREISER.

It is natural that there should have been preconceived ideas of what the autobiography would be like. How it would be written was a foregone fact, for Theodore Dreiser writes in only one way. He never has had one style for fiction, another for description, another for discourse. He has written everything in the same plodding fashion. He really writes atrociously.

There is no grace in his choice of words or their pattern. He uses such stolid uglinesses as "the same" continuously. There is no rhythm to his prose, no esthetic allure. It is certainly not for the way he writes that he has come to his position of great eminence in American letters. That is founded on the stern solidity of his work. The style has a certain stolid cloddishness that grows flat on the ground and that gives an amazing sense of strength. There is something elemental about Theodore Dreiser's writing. It is slow, dull, involved, and lacking in beauty, but it has undeniable power.

"Dawn" is written in the same style as everything else this author has done. It is almost another "American Tragedy" with the author for the hero. But where that novel lacked pathos [at least to this reader], where it touched readers almost not at all, emotionally "Dawn" has at times, especially in the first part, emotional appeal.

The first half of "Dawn" has the same tug of emotion that "Jennie Gerhardt" has [and to me that is the only supremely great book that Theodore Dreiser ever wrote]. It has a tenderness that the story about his brother Paul in "Twelve Men" possesses. The story of Dreiser's poverty-stricken childhood, one of ten children, all of them vivified by the personality of a generous, tender, careless, happy, hard-working mother, he tells with an emotion which even his stolid style can not disguise. Life was hard, food was scarce, the children had to leave school because they did not have shoes, daughters were wayward, sons were drunken or ne'er-do-wells, the father was a religious fanatic and a broken man—but they were a happy family. Dreiser has managed somehow to convey, in his picture of his mother, the joy that one human being can shed in a bitter world. His mother, as he pictures her in his autobiography, is the greatest character he has ever put on paper.

He is almost idyllic about the young Theodore Dreiser, too. That little boy who loved with an intense passion the out-of-doors, who was lonely and shy and eager and unhappy, he pictures with an appealing sympathy. Of the hodge-podge family life, now here, now there, now together, now separated, he gives vivid but less emotional pictures. Some of the best and most memorable writing that Theodore Dreiser ever has done is in the first part of "Dawn."

That is something, perhaps, that every one didn't expect of the autobiography—sentiment, frank and whole-souled.

Although Dreiser is franker about sex in "Dawn" than he has ever been in anything he has previously written, his obsession with it does not appear until at least a third of the book has been finished. And the idyllic, lyric mood of the first part of the book carries on occasionally through the last two-thirds. He induces, at odd moments throughout the book, that mood of almost idyllic pathos.

The boy, sent for a year to college by a teacher who was interested in him, groping for the solution to the problem of his own social inferiority and finding solace in his little pose of intellectualism, is a touching picture. The boy is shown growing into manhood with the attitude of the child who never knew the right people in Warsaw, Ind., and cared terribly that he didn't. His frankness in discussing his gropings into sex are naturally more startling to the reader than his discussion of his gropings into social contacts, but one is as intimately shared as the other. And while the reader might have expected Dreiser to share the one [from his experience in Mr. Dreiser's previous books], the absolutely unreserved intimacy with which he sets down his spiritual reactions is something of a surprise. It is a comment upon our day that confidential disclosures about intimacies of the body are much less rare in literature now than are really outspoken records of the spirit.

Many of the other characters in "Dawn" besides his mother and himself the author treats as he did the characters in "An American Tragedy." He draws them with meticulous attention to detail. They are a tremendous panorama of human beings, but all of them are rather "specimens" looked at with a cold, observing eye and set down without emotion. They are the members of his family and the countless human beings that he came in contact with during his meager school days and his early working years. As he draws the hero [himself] and the heroine [his mother] they are to him so vivid and living that even his usual stolid pen flows with sentiment.

Book Attacks Mandate of New Zealand in Samoa

"Samoa Under the Sailing Gods," by N. A. Rowe [Putnam], makes a brave start toward the goal of an authoritative history of the British part of the Samoa group. Mr. Rowe pens an interesting story of the days of the first white visitors down to the New Zealand mandate. Then, to the American reader at least, the interest gets tangled in propaganda in favor of England taking over New Zealand's duties.

After reading Lloyd Osborne's biting introduction, one expects an exposé of conditions under the New Zealanders that will just about force England to assume responsibilities. It's true, red tape apparently has tied up the Samoan mandate so tight it's making both natives and whites squeal, but the telling of it is a bit wearying to a Yankee.

MIDWEST CLAIMS THREE OF PULITZER AWARDS WINNERS

Chicago is rarely blessed this year in being the home base of two winners of Pulitzer prizes, the one for the novel and the one for history. In a sense the winner of the drama prize is one of us, for she was born in Davenport, Ia., and went to the University of Chicago (for her post-graduate work). She wrote her first novel about it, "The Glory of the Conquered." The middle west, if not Chicago actually, can claim Susan Glaspell and bask a little in the sunshine of "Allison's House" having been awarded the Pulitzer prize in drama.

Margaret Ayer Barnes is as much a Chicagoan as Chicago produces, and "Years of Grace," the prize winning novel, is as Chicago as any novel could be, beginning with the days when North Michigan avenue was Pine street and its idyllic inhabitants kept cows. It is a first novel. "Prevailing Winds," Mrs. Barnes' first published book, was a collection of short stories.

Bernadotte Everly Schmitt, whose "Coming of the Great War" won the history prize, is a Chicagoan by adoption, both on his part and (proudly) on Chicago's. He has lived here since 1925 when he came to the University of Chicago to the chair of modern history.

This is the first time in the history of the awarding of the Pulitzer prize that it has gone to two Chicagoans in the same year. F. B.

Youths' Books Include Life of Beethoven

While "Pigeon City" Is Title of Another.

BY AGATHA L. SHEA.

[Director of Children's Work for Branches of the Chicago Public Library.]

"Pigeon City," by Leon F. Whitney [McBride].

"Wandering Monday," by Ragnhild Chevalier [Macmillan].

In a season which has been marked by the publication of several biographies of interest, "Beethoven, Master Musician," takes its place as one of the most fascinating and valuable books for young people, for in this fine story of the struggles and accomplishments of the great composer we find more than an account of one man's life. It is rather the story of the visions and ideals of youth, and of the dreams which have been dreamed in attics and hovels through the centuries—dreams and ideals which youth the world over understands.

Beginning with the birth of Ludwig Beethoven in an attic in Bonn, the author tells the story of his life, of its hardships, of the unhappy family life that was his after the death of the mother he adored, of the difficulties which he overcame because of that inner urge which drove him ever on, of his magnificent accomplishments, and finally of the loneliness and nobility of his passing. It is the story of a gentle, kindly man, too easily imposed upon by an unscrupulous family, illy repaid for the love and care he lavished upon those who should have been his companions and aids in his old age.

It is the account not of a happy life, but of a brave and self-sacrificing one, which gave Ludwig van Beethoven few pleasures, but which gave him a place among the immortals. The author has succeeded not only in giving us a picture of the man and the genius, but has also woven into the story something of the background of the times and his contemporaries, bringing out the relations of Beethoven with Mozart, Haydn, Liszt, and other musicians whose names stand beside his own today. A fine book that will offer inspiration to any boy or girl of high school age and one which might well be noted by parents and friends who will soon be seeking graduation gifts.

Two recent books of particular interest to the younger children are "Pigeon City," by Leon F. Whitney, and "Wandering Monday," by Ragnhild Chevalier. The first will be popular with boys of 11 to 12 year group who are interested in carrier pigeons and the possibilities of training them. Although presented in story form, much information is given to young trainers in the method of selecting stock, raising and training the birds. The story of the three boys and their birds which finally won the great race is an interesting story for any boy, but for those who have pigeons or would like to have them it is informational as well as good reading. "Wandering Monday" is a story of Norway and its customs and is especially significant because of the demand for books of this type for World Friendship and International lists. It tells of the special celebrations of various days and of the home life of the children.

Real Flight from Prison Like Fantasy of Dumas

Invisible ink, a can of bully beef concealing a compass, money stuffed into a tube of toothpaste, and a cap camouflaged in a jar of marmalade—these are the worn out tricks of the Rover Boys. Yet they are the very tricks by which Maj. M. C. C. Harrison, D. S. O., M. C., and Capt. H. A. Cartwright, M. C., officers in the British army, effected their escape from a German prison camp.

It took ingenuity to make a successful getaway. Equipment necessary for such an expedition included a compass (that time worn instrument of all adventurers), civilian clothes, a map of the country, a ten day food supply, a metal saw, a key, and, if possible, a civilian passport. These articles must be manufactured out of prison fare, under the vigilance of prison personnel.

This was the problem which Maj. Harrison and Capt. Cartwright solved in 1918, and have written about it in "Within Four Walls" [Longmans].

SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF NEW YORK

United States of America, Libelant, v.
One Obscene Book entitled "MARRIED LOVE," G. P. Putnam's Sons, Claimant. } Opinion A-106/165

"I dismiss the libel in this case.

"'Married Love' is a considered attempt to explain to married people how their mutual sex life may be made happier.

"It makes also some apparently justified criticisms of the inopportune exercise by the man in the marriage relation, of what are often referred to as his conjugal or marital rights, and it pleads with seriousness, and not without some eloquence, for a better understanding by husbands of the physical and emotional side of the sex life of their wives.

"I do not find anything exceptionable anywhere in the book, and I cannot imagine a normal mind to which this book would seem to be obscene or immoral within the proper definition of those words, or whose sex impulses would be stirred by reading it. The book before me here has as its whole thesis the strengthening of the centripetal forces in marriage, and instead of being inhospitably received, it should, I think, be welcomed within our borders."

SOVIET WORKERS FACE DEATH FOR ERRORS IN WORK

Considered Sabotage by Government.

BY HENRY WALES.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MOSCOW, April 17.—[By mail.]—Capital punishment has been abolished in soviet Russia in civil and criminal cases. It exists as the supreme punishment for political offenses.

But nearly every accusation can be construed as a crime against the state as treason. Inefficiency, carelessness, thoughtlessness, bad judgment, lack of foresight, all can be twisted into the category of sabotage, for which the penalty may be death by shooting.

The authorities, through the state prosecutor, impugn into all charges of sabotage an element of treachery, a deliberate attempt to weaken the government, an effort to overthrow the existing régime and, by implication, the substitution of another autocracy.

Hinders Five Year Plan.

This situation constitutes one of the most serious obstacles to the successful execution of the five year plan and to its operation, once completed.

It robs civil servants—and theoretically and practically every adult person in the land is a functionary of the state—of initiative, of willingness to accept responsibility, of readiness to adopt new ideas and to embrace modern methods.

Every one seeks to escape assuming risks which may eventually lead to an inquisition by the dread G. P. U., to an extorted "confession" and the inevitable long prison sentence, exile, or death which may result.

Circumstances dictate that government in Russia today must look to the ranks of its inherent enemies for leadership in its various projects. It is the intelligentsia, the remnants of the old imperial régime, the well educated, the relics of the aristocracy and the upper bourgeoisie, who must furnish a large part of the personnel for directing the different units of the five year plan, and the accompanying labyrinth of bureaucratic posts.

New Generation Untried.

Certain of the proletariat, it is true, have fought their way to the fore, through innate intelligence and indomitable will to succeed, to acquire the necessary knowledge to fill important positions, but the new generation of the revolution has not yet come of age and its ability has not been tested.

So the communists have been forced to avail themselves of the services of their enemies, as witnessed by the recent trials in which it was brought out that "interventionists" and the mensheviks have continued to hold responsible and important positions in the camp of the enemy until their treasonable activities became so ramified and flagrant that they could no longer be concealed or ignored.

With each succeeding propaganda trial and cry of sabotage the fear of being accused of treason is instilled deeper into those who occupy responsible positions, and the apprehensions of those who are not heart and soul with the bolsheviks become greater. They sought to throw up their positions and take refuge in humble positions rather than run the risks they incur in higher places, but the recent decrees drafting men to the places the government considers they are trained to fill has riveted them to their jobs.

Wave of Inertia.

As a result a great wave of inertia is encountered among the middle class of state servants. The laborers and ordinary skilled workmen are below the danger zone, safe in their numbers, the higher-ups are above it, secure in their influence and affiliations. But the central strata, the engineers, experts, specialists, managers, superintendents, directors, foremen, are in dread of committing some error which may lead to charges of treachery.

A couple of years ago a railroad administrator recommended heavier locomotives and cars, capable of hauling heavier loads. It was pointed out that heavier trains would require heavier rails and ballast, stronger bridges, higher tunnels, in short reconstruction of the lines. He was accused of obstructing the reorganization of the railways, found guilty of sabotage, and shot.

Last winter an engineer refused to proceed with concrete construction because the freezing weather prevented the cement from setting properly. He was accused of attempting to delay the completion of the factory and given a long jail sentence. The man who replaced him proceeded with the work, and when a whole wing of the newly erected plant collapsed, he was exiled for criminal negligence in attempting to build with concrete in zero weather.

Catch It from All Sides.

Managers of supplies in cities and large towns have been imprisoned both for withholding stocks to dole out among the proletariat, who then complained over the insufficiency of the merchandise offered, and for disposing of their wares too rapidly and permitting the workers to raid the shops until the shelves were bare.

The innumerable trials for inefficiency, dressed up as sabotage and treason against the state, have intimidated thousands of high class men and worried them to a state where they refuse to commit themselves to anything which might possibly react against them.

American specialists, here to inculcate modern methods in the soviet's hitching industry, all complain of the same difficulties, the apathy of a large percentage of their Russian colleagues, their reluctance to take energetic measures to adopt recommendations which Red gold is paying to obtain from imported experts.

Workers Willing but Afraid.

The Americans generally agree that the workers are hustlers and willing, anxious to learn and generous in their efforts. The "big shots" in the Kremlin, too, are wholesouled in their cooperation and lavish in their pledges for adopting scientific and efficient systems. "Rationalization" in the jargon of the experts.

But between the two levels is the stagger of fear and indifference which goes a long way toward nullifying the activities of the Americans.

"Our position here is purely in an advisory capacity," an American explained to me. "We explain our views on matters to the Russians with whom we work. They always listen to us courteously, and apparently accept our recommendations. Then the plans are sent to the draftsmen, and on their completion we find them bristling with the same fundamental errors which we warned against. But we realise that many of these men are in mortal fear of being accused of sabotage if something they are responsible for slips and falls. Naturally, we are extremely reluctant to go over their heads to the big bosses in the Kremlin and complain about them."

Americans Not Responsible.

American specialists here assume no responsibility for anything, as they merely recommend and the execution of projects on which they are consulted is left to the Russians. But most American experts always insist on obtaining a signed release from their colleagues on every piece of work with which they are connected, specifying that alterations or amendments were made to plans they had indorsed in principle.

"I keep these certificates right in my wallet, with my passport and money," one said to me. "If anything ever happens to any of the machinery whose installation I have worked on I have my alibis all ready."

In fact, there is a certain amount of covert sabotage going on all the time by Russian technicians and even by certain workmen. In a country where entire classes of society have been outlawed and rendered destitute it would be surprising if none failed to harbor thoughts of revenge against those who had despoiled them.

Cites Case of Sabotage.

"There is no doubt that in many, many cases men in important positions are only too anxious to see the projects they are working on fail," a highly placed American engineer said. "I found one Russian engineer who deliberately reduced the margin of safety ratio from 5-1 to 3-1 in a big construction enterprise. I happened to notice the discrepancy as I was checking over the plans and called it to his attention. He merely smiled and proceeded to corect the figures, but I know he had done it intentionally."

This man, the American ascertained later, had lost his home, his property, his wife, and two children in the savage days of the revolution. He had no sense of loyalty to the institution which was now his boss.

Reported Engaged

ELIZABETH MORROW.
[Acme Photo.]

Englewood, N. J., May 8.—[Special.]—Elisabeth Morrow, eldest daughter of Dwight Morrow, who was reported engaged to Col. Charles A. Lindbergh before her sister, Anne, became his bride, is secretly engaged to a New Jersey minister, widowed on his honeymoon two years ago.

He is the Rev. Clyde H. Roddy, pastor of the First Presbyterian church of North Arlington, N. J., two miles from the Morrow home at Englewood. The Rev. Mr. Roddy said that "the announcement should come from the Morrow family."

Despite attempts to keep it secret, the engagement of the minister and the heiress is a well known fact among close friends.

COUNTY TACKLES REDISTRICTING PROBLEM TODAY

Fourteen Congress Seats to Be Allotted.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., May 8.—[Special.]—A tentative remap of the congressional districts in Cook county has been started by the joint subcommittee on redistricting of which Sol P. Roderick [Rep., Chicago] is chairman. It will be discussed at the county building in Chicago tomorrow. The metropolitan area, which was adopted as a basis for the reapportionment, is being followed in fashioning the proposed new district boundaries.

SOL. P. RODERICK.

The understanding is that in drafting a tentative map to submit to the legislature the counties of Lake, Will, and Du Page are to be lumped with Cook county and that this area should be carved into fourteen new congressional districts. Grundy county, with a population of 18,678, has been included, although not exactly metropolitan.

Downstate Map Altered.

A map plotting the rest of the state into 13 districts was prepared some time ago and is being altered from time to time as friends of some of the downstate congressmen protest that too much friendly territory is being lopped off here and there and strange territory of different political complexion is being tacked on in spots. The congressmen were heard at a luncheon here last month, and those from downstate voiced a hope that their districts would be left almost as they are. They advanced the idea of giving Cook county the two seats now held by the congressmen-at-large.

The committee, however, is proceeding on the theory that the districts are not made for the congressmen and maintains the idea of a metropolitan area as the way to strike a balance.

The Old and the New.

At present under a redistricting system which is thirty years old, Cook county, with more than one-half the population of Illinois, has only 10 of the 25 district congressmen, and Lake county is included in one of the districts, the 10th.

In the remap, 27 new districts are to be created. Under a strict application of the ratio, Cook county, with 52 per cent of the population, would get 14 seats. By retaining Lake county and adding Dupage, Will and Grundy counties, the metropolitan section would contain 4,307,918 inhabitants for 14 districts. The average population would be about 308,000. The precise ratio, if the population were divided by 27, would be around 282,000 to a district. Under the plan 56 per cent of the population would have 52 per cent of the seats, whereas at present 54 per cent of the people have only 40 per cent of the districts.

JOLIET UTILITY TO USE ILLINOIS WATER TUNNEL

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., May 8.—[Special.]—Gov. Emmerson today signed the Barr bill under which the public utilities at Joliet may be given the right to use an Illinois waterway tunnel for placing cables, conduits, gas and water mains.

In constructing the waterway through Joliet the state had to build a tunnel under the Des Plaines river, 60 feet in the solid rock, to get rid of water mains and sewers that had been laid on fixed bridges, which are to be superseded by open spans.

Sponsors of the new law say it enables the state to collect $75,000 from the Joliet utilities to cover their share of the tunnel expense.

Another bill signed by the governor was:

S. B. 141-Courtney—Amends Chicago police pension fund and provides that the maximum tax for benefit fund be kept at 17-20 of a mill to Jan. 1, 1932; increases it to 1 1-10 mill in the next two years, and thereafter 1 3-10 mills. Includes police surgeon, drillmaster and identification officer under the act. Provides amount which a person who is 50 years old may receive after twenty years service shall be equal to 50 per cent of the compensation attached to the rank he held by virtue of civil service appointment at the time of his resignation or discharge, instead of 50 per cent of whatever salary he was drawing at time of retirement.

SOVIET REFUSES MEARS A PERMIT TO CROSS RUSSIA

Los Angeles, Cal., May 8.—(AP)—John Henry Mears, the globe girdler, having prepared a $25,000 monoplane for his third attempt to establish a world circling record, yesterday announced receipt of a telegram from soviet government representatives in Washington refusing him permission to use the soviet air lanes.

Mears said he would fly to New York next week to see if anything could be done about it.

"It's a mystery to me," he declared. "When I made my record flight around the world in 1928, the late Capt. C. B. D. Collyer and I had all the coöperation the Russian government could give and everything went fine."

The Graf Zeppelin holds the present record of twenty-one days, which Mears had hoped to lower to fifteen. The takeoff, with Vance Breese as pilot, had been set for some time next month at Harbor Grace, N. F.

SNATCHES WOMAN'S PURSE.

Gertrude Stein Writes Another Colorful Book

It's Called "Lucy Church Amiably."

BY ELLEN DU POY.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—"Lucy Church Amiably, a Novel of Romantic Beauty and Nature and Which Looks Like an Engraving," by Gertrude Stein, is an ideal bedside book. Which will please the author. For Gertrude Stein once confided to me that that was one of her ambitions . . . to be found on little tables beside beds.

GERTRUDE STEIN.

I read "Lucy Church Amiably" in bed.

I put "Lucy Church Amiably" on the little table beside my bed. I cannot sleep. I turn on the light and snatch up Lucy. Page twelve.

"White and delight," I read, and close the book. I lie back upon my white pillow somewhere in the middle of May. There is white everywhere . . . white blossoms piling the boughs of trees . . . white clouds cumulous in a pale blue sky . . . white snow peaking a distant mountain . . . white stone bridging the foamy flow of a river . . .

I go to sleep cradled in white and my dreams are delight.

Then there is another night.

"Lucy Church is indebted to rain for her belief in white and pink." There is rain whipping the glass of the window, but I am indebted to it. I lie there believing in white and pink. I lie there believing that the rain that is whipping the glass will whip out white and pink buds and trees, buds that will later be whipped into apples and peaches and plums and pears . . . I dream of apples . . . every kind of apple from the pale green sour one destined to be the middle of a pie to the fabulous ones which are the apples of Cezanne.

Now to be less sleepy and more serious, let us discuss the novel proper. The first sentence give us the key.

"To bring them back to an appreciation of natural beauty or the beauty of nature, hills, valleys, fields, and birds. They say it is beautiful, but they will sit in it. This brings us to Lucy Church."

This brings us to Lucy Church with nature about her . . . spread out before her and behind her like an engraving.

"And with a nod she turned her head toward the falling water. Amiably." The whole romantic movement in that sentence. In fact, the whole book is Lamartine done with a Picasso touch. Paul and Virginia in fragments put together like a cubist picture.

Lucy Church stands there and she knows "it is not easy to be seen wishing when the water is noisy." There's a whole essay on psychology in that sentence. Nor will this sentence soothe you. It kept me awake.

The book teems with poetry.

Gertrude Stein goes on giving us Lucy Church . . . Lucy Church "wishing she might have been as fortunate as she was" . . . Lucy Church not singing "because it was not the custom of the country to sing."

She gives us John Mary . . . John Mary who "unconsciously had an origin" and who "joins wheat to more wheat and is very well pleased with the result. So is all France."

Sums up the agricultural situation in France as well as John Mary. Then there is soap.

"Why," asks Gertrude Stein, "has no one written the biography of the man who though of and made the soap that floats?"

For Gertrude Stein is mistress of a vast psychological kingdom where one simple sentence can unfurl a whole canvas, unroll a whole countryside, evoke a whole movement, analyze a whole generation. She sets an army in motion . . . a whole army of lovely names [for Gertrude Stein loves names] . . . names like Lucy Church, John Mary, Simon Therese, Lindo Webb, Yvonne Pagoda, Milly Lamartine . . . and they in their very sound have their story too.

Perhaps They're Funnier.

"More Boners" [Viking], the second volume of schoolboy [and girl] mistakes, compiled from actual examination papers, is, believe us, as funny as "Boners," and that means FUNNY.

BRITISH DRAMATIST APPEARS IN LONDON FURNITURE STORE

BY FRANK SWINNERTON.

LONDON. — [Special Correspondence.]—There are two London stores which are celebrated for their distinctive quality. They are Messrs. Fortnum & Mason and Messrs. Heal. The latter firm deals entirely in furniture, glass, china, and daringly designed cretonnes and other materials. Those who do not like the style of furnishing provided by Messrs. Heal purse their lips and murmur "Healish." But they do not deny that there is a Heal manner.

BARBARA BLACKBURN.

Now if one visits the shop of Messrs. Heal one is served, as a rule, by an assistant who seems to have come straight from the art world of Chelsea. It would be possible to discuss the works of Mrs. Woolf or Mr. Osbert Sitwell with him or her. And in the Mansard gallery attached to Messrs. Heal's shop many ultra-modern painters have exhibited their work. It is not, therefore, with surprise that one learns of a new play which has been written by one of Messrs. Heal's assistants. This play is being produced by Mr. Basil Dean.

It is called "Autumn Crocus," and the author calls herself "C. L. Anthony." But she is really Miss Dodie Smith; and it is she who buys toys and pictures for Messrs. Heal. It appears that some time ago Miss Smith visited the Leipzig fair on behalf of the firm, and also spent a short holiday in the Austrian Tyrol.

This visit was directly responsible for the "setting" of "Autumn Crocus." But Miss Smith was assisted in her literary work by some genuine theatrical experience during and after the war, when she acted under Mr. Basil Dean's direction and in some repertory productions.

The new novel by Miss Barbara Blackburn called "Marriage and Money" should do a great deal to draw the attention of discerning readers to Miss Blackburn's delicate and amusing work. It is not a perfect book, but it has wit and insight. Also power. It deals with a class of which little is written—the class of not very successful young men and women who sell motor cars, wireless outfits, and such things, and who (now that English people are spending less on what they consider luxuries) do not have very much money for themselves.

This Author Brings His Travels to Your Bedside

"The Bed Book of Travel," by Richardson Wright [Lippincott], is a jolly, informative, bright red covered volume [and for that reason it's nearly always called the "Red Book of Travel" by the compositor of any comments on it] by which you can tour several continents without leaving the old fourposter, if that's the kind you do your night reading in. Mr. Wright is a much traveled man. And, better still, he knows how to write delightfully about what he's seen. "The Bed Book" contains an odd combination of unusual short stories sandwiched in between charming comments on travel and humorous experiences. It's an enjoyable novelty in travel books.

When in Doubt Fokker Telegraphs Ideas in Full

Anthony Fokker, whose biography, "Flying Dutchman" [Holt], contained such sensational material about aircraft and prominent flyers that it got into the news stories, is a temperamental Hollander as well as a millionaire. He would have to be if he does this sort of thing often. He sent his publishers the last correction on his manuscript in a 575 word straight telegram from California to New York.

THE ILLINOIS SUPREME COURT.

The request for two commissioners to assist the Illinois Supreme court has served to focus the attention of the legislature on the difficulties under which the court is presently laboring. Members of the legislature and other citizens as well would much prefer not to examine too closely into the matter; unfortunately, it is not possible to avoid the issue. A condition exists which must be faced in the interest of the state, not to say of the members of the court itself.

Chief Justice Dunn, in his testimony before the judiciary committee of the house, said there would be no need for commissioners if all the members of the court were able to work; under those circumstances, he said, the court without outside help could keep up with its docket. Unfortunately, again, there is no reason to expect, however much it might be hoped, that the present members of the court can keep pace with the quantity of litigation that is thrust upon them. Chief Justice Dunn, in reply to a question, said that one justice had not written an opinion in eighteen months. Another, who has made a valiant attempt to defy his physical infirmities, finds it increasingly difficult to attend the conferences of the court.

The two commissioners whose appointment is now in question are at present serving the court. In view of Chief Justice Dunn's declaration, their retention can hardly be interpreted as other than a confession of the court's infirmities. The condition is one with which Illinois lawyers are familiar, but they seldom have spoken of it above a whisper. The fact, however, must be faced that there is widespread dissatisfaction among the members of the Illinois bar with the work of the state's highest tribunal. It is not a court which is in all respects worthy of the Illinois bar. It will not stand comparison with similar institutions in many other states.

The moment has come to look for remedies. In the first place, we believe, the fact of superannuation must be recognized and acted upon. There are, here and there, individuals of which Mr. Justice Holmes stands as the example, who seem able to defy the processes of senescence. They remain singularly free from the infirmities which harass old age. It is possible that one or two of the older members of our court might continue to work at full vigor despite advanced years, but it would be hoping too much to expect it of more than one or two.

No one relishes the task of informing a man of his waning powers, and the duty to do so, so far as the Illinois court is concerned, has therefore been avoided. Indeed, the subject might not have been raised at this time had not the court itself brought on the discussion. In future the unpleasant task can be avoided by a law fixing a compulsory retirement age for Supreme court justices. Needless to say, the present grant of only half the judge's salary as a retirement pension is niggardly. The judges are none too well paid during their active years and should continue to draw their full stipend as long as they live.

The adoption of these companion measures would serve to remedy the more obvious weaknesses of our highest court. With a bench occupied by men of physical and mental vigor there would be no question of falling behind in the docket; and it is altogether probable that vacillation and inconsistency would be much less pronounced than they have been in recent years. Valuable as these remedies would be, they would not, however, of themselves serve to raise the standard of the Illinois court to a point commensurate with the standing in the nation of the Illinois bar. To achieve that end, additional measures are required.

The constitution of the state vests in the legislature the power to reapportion the seven judicial districts. As matters stand at present the court must draw six-sevenths of its members from among a minority of the lawyers of the state. And it is in the remaining district that the most important litigation arises and the more important clients are found. It is therefore in the remaining district, composed of Cook and neighboring counties, that a disproportionately large number of the able and more experienced lawyers have congregated.

The standard of Illinois jurisprudence is likely to be improved only as this pool of legal talent is drawn upon. At present Chicago can send only one man to the court. If the constitutional provision for reapportionment in accordance with the rule of equality in population were followed the Cook county bar could contribute three and perhaps four of its seven members.

The constitutional provision for reapportioning the court is not as clearly phrased as it might be, but there can be no slightest doubt that the sole objective in the minds of the framers was the establishment of equality in population as between districts. No constitution of an American state could be so absurd as to provide that less than 44 per cent of the population shall elect more than 55 per cent of the judges. Yet by its inaction the legislature for all practical purposes has written such a provision into the Illinois constitution. It has permitted one citizen merely because he happens to live in Pike county to weigh as heavily in choosing the court as fifteen citizens in Cook, Lake, Will, Du Page, or Kankakee county.

The existing condition is not only an intolerable affront to the majority of the people of the state; it is also a most important cause of the widespread dissatisfaction among lawyers with the court's work. Plainly, it is the duty of the legislature to find the expedient by which the judicial districts can be equalized within the meaning of the constitution.

CRIME AND THE STATE.

While THE TRIBUNE is no friend of the multiplication of government bureaus, the proposal of Representative Lyons of Mundelein of a state bureau of criminal investigation and identification deserves favorable consideration. The bill he has introduced is not before us, but a news dispatch reports that "the bureau will contain a complete file of fingerprints, measurements, and records of every person convicted of a felony in Illinois."

This state record is no doubt needed. The larger cities can maintain records for themselves, but this leaves all the territory outside of them covered inadequately or not at all. A well organized state record would cover this field. Perhaps Representative Lyons' bill might be made occasion for a comprehensive consideration by the legislature of state agencies for dealing with crime. It must be clear to the legislators representing rural districts that small communities cannot cope with crimes committed by the organized professional class. In past time crime in the small town was usually an individual offense, but times have changed. Crime is now highly organized and does not confine itself to large cities. It goes where there are profitable victims. Raids on small town banks and kidnapings are not crimes with which the small community can maintain agencies to deal very efficiently. This should be the responsibility of the state government.

The state is a sovereign political entity, with the police power and police responsibilities. It would seem it should have a department of justice equipped with means of detecting and prosecuting crime and giving protection to all its people. The obstruction of organized labor to a state police is not considerate of the people's right to better protection from crime. The bureau proposed by Representative Lyons should be established. But it may be advisable for the legislature to give some consideration to the possibilities of a better organization against crime through the state government.

YOUTH AND PROHIBITION.

Dean Mendell of Yale has advised the students to join the university branch of the Crusaders, the national organization for the repeal of the eighteenth amendment. The dean said he believed the country had made a mistake in adopting this constitutional decree and that the remedy would be found when the younger generation of the nation came to a reconsideration of the subject after study.

Dean Mendell thus offers further proof that the intelligence of the United States is virtually without division in its opinion of national prohibition. It is wrong as a theory in American government and it is impractical as an expedient. The expectation of the prohibitionists ten years ago was that the new generation would enter the scene of public opinion with no doubts whatever of the eighteenth amendment. Not the least of their mistakes was this expectation. If the experiment had been sound they would not have been disappointed. It is not by chance that they are. The procedure contained too much error to succeed. The failure in every other country—even Finland has now returned to the licensing of beer—is not testimony to the depravity of all these various peoples, but is merely evidence that rationality cannot be ruled out of government where freedom has not been extinguished. A sufficiently powerful dry despot might succeed or seem to succeed with such a policy, but although the Anti-Saloon league has such a will here it cannot maintain the necessary strength.

The youth of America, as Dean Mendell sees, will bring a fresh judgment to bear on the question. It will not be derived from altruistic speculation or wishful thinking, but from observation and experience.

CHICAGO'S WARD MAP.

A system of elected government will not work properly on a basis of rotten boroughs. It cannot be expected to. When an equitable ratio of representation has been deranged by design or through neglect the integrity of the government has been destroyed. Special interest is created. It may be the special interest of the worst elements in the community or of the most powerful of hoodlums or high hats. A public organization controlled through vest pocket divisions or rotten boroughs will be rotten itself.

In the ten years in which Chicago has been governed on the fifty ward plan there have been population shifts which now present gross inequalities of representation in the city council. There are thirteen wards which have less than fifty thousand population. There are seven which have over 100,000. Some range above eighty and ninety, others below sixty. It is largely useless to seek a council composed as it should be upon such a basis of representation. The effort has been paralyzed before it begins. The election is framed before the voters go to the polls.

THE ELECTRIFIED LACKAWANNA.

[New York Times.]

Electrification of the Lackawanna railroad has occasioned the usual amenities between a company and its patrons when a great improvement has been introduced. Gala observances marked the running of the first trains under electric power.

In a letter written by President Davis to the Business Historical society he relates how his railroad came to be electrified. Long considered, it was not until a committee representing "the interested communities" called upon the management and "demanded electrification, declaring their willingness to pay a reasonable increase in commutation fares, that the enterprise was authorized in March, 1928." In a hilly country in which grades and curves are necessary, electrification involves difficulties that do not occur on the level. A vast deal of surveying had to be done. Seventy miles of road, carrying 180 miles of track, had to undergo the change in motive power. A 2,000 volt direct current was necessary. Signals must be altered. Now that the work is done and electric trains are run as far out as Dover, starting is four times as fast as can be managed on a steam railroad. Time between stations has been reduced, and the whistle has given way to "a pleasantly toned pneuphonic horn." The population of 1,250,000 which the railroad serves promises to show an increase that will help to make electrification pay.

SPASMODIC TENDENCIES.

[Copyright: 1931: By The Chicago Tribune.]

NOTICE the dog sleeping before the fire. Occasionally he will jerk a leg. Sometimes the jerking will be repeated every few minutes. Sometimes you will hear him give a suppressed growl or bark. If so, he is having a nightmare. Sometimes he will move his legs in a miniature run as if he is having an ordinary dream. Neither of these is the type of movement to which attention is now directed. The movement now in mind is the more indirect spasmodic jerking to which sleeping dogs are addicted.

Physiologists tell us these movements are due to excess of guanidine in the blood. Guanidine is an organic substance that develops midway between protein and urea in the changes by which the animal body breaks up the former and uses what it needs of its values and throws the rest away as urea. The theory is that dogs fed on a heavy protein diet have an excess of it. The protein in excess which dogs are apt to get comes from meat.

When the blood contains too much of this guanidine there is a tendency towards jerking of the muscles. If the excess is not great and the subject is a human being we say he is "jumpy." If it is at the far end of the scale convulsions are the result. In between are various gradations. The baby with spasmophilia and a tendency to croup has a slight excess of it. If there are spasms or a violent attack of croup the excess is great.

Dr. Traut and Mr. MacFate have developed a method by which physicians and laboratories can test the blood to discover how much guanidine it contains, whether too much, too little, or just enough. Perhaps the chief work of the parathyroid gland is to restrain a tendency toward convulsions, to keep the nerves and muscles from being too much on a hair trigger. This it is supposed to do by holding the guanidine of the blood about where it should be—neither a famine nor a feast. The lime salts have the same effect, doing in a chemical way what the parathyroid does in a somewhat higher way.

When one is on edge, "jumpy," or subject to hay fever, asthma, croup, or to spasms physicians give him some preparation of lime by the mouth, by injection under the skin or into a vein. They use gluconate, lactate chloride, or some other. These lime remedies are supposed to act by lowering the guanidine content of the blood.

WANTS TO BE HEAVIER.

J. B. writes: I am now in my 18th year and weigh approximately 133 pounds. For the last year I have tried exhaustive means to gain weight, but it seems as though it were impossible for me to do so. I am 5 feet 11½ inches tall, so I ought to weigh about 20 pounds more than I do. I have tried yeast, and taking morning, afternoon, and evening exercises. I eat nothing but the very nourishing foods and still gain no weight. I have never had a serious illness.

REPLY.

In addition to your regular diet, eat a bowl of milk and bread or sugared rice twice daily. Be regular in your habits. Get a nap after lunch; get plenty of sleep at night. Cultivate relaxation.

This will fatten you unless you belong to the Cassius tribe.

CURING STUTTERING CHILD.

Mrs. T. L. J. writes: My little son, aged 3, has recently started stuttering. Could you discuss stuttering? Can it be caused by illness, or a fall? What is the treatment? Can you refer me to any helpful publications?

REPLY.

Stuttering results from nervousness. Thinking is done on one schedule, and the making of words on another. Cure consists in making both systems run on the same schedule. Train the boy in poise. Have him think and act placidly, and speak slowly and calmly, and the trouble ends. With older children more set in their ways, cure is more difficult. Blanton's book should help you; there are other good ones.

AND HE ALWAYS RUNS THROUGH THE RED LIGHT.

A Berlin professor is going to read character by listening to the voice of any person at all over the radio. We can do that now. Whenever we hear a preacher or an announcer or statesman or lecturer say "constitooshun" and "roon" and "jooler" over the radio we know there goes a man who has defaulted for five hundred thousand bucks, who beats his mother-in-law, has set fire to three homes, throws his wife out of the house every night, has robbed ten banks, scuttled six ocean liners, wears tan shoes and a yellow necktie with his full dress suit, and eats pie with a spoon. Character reading by hearing a voice over the radio. It's elementary, my dear Watson, merely elementary.

TULIPS.

I call these jovial flowers
Because their shade
Is manifold in a city park,
And they are bold flowers and unafraid,
Out this May morning for a happy lark.
The purple and the crimson and the pied,
And they are blatant in their gaudy pride
And no cold mornings seem to frighten them.
O tulip flowers, a gentry born of May,
The vigil lights of spring that flutter on,
The season has a cold, indifferent way,
But cheerily you brighten up the lawn.
Flower of the May, the frost lies in your cup
Until a mounting orb distills in dew,
Leaving a nectar the high sun drinks up
And from the bluest heaven smiles on you.

IT MUST HAVE BEEN ABOUT 10 O'CLOCK.

(From the Sat. Eve. Post.)

Ten o'clock. Only ten o'clock! It seemed incredible. The completeness of his insulation within a vast cushion of silence had distorted the proportions of time so that the hour had seemed drenched with the essence of an obligatory solitude.

WE WERE HAVING an argument and the other fellow was pointing in triumph to an item in the paper that said a new potato peeling machine was proving very popular in Europe. "There," he said, "get those potato peeling machines over here and you'll put the short-order divorce business in Reno on the rocks." But we don't think so. The woman that is glad to peel potatoes, and pleased at having the potatoes to peel, isn't the kind that goes to Nevada questing a hurry-up divorce. The women who shriek for quick divorces never saw a potato except when it was mashed or fried and brought into the dining room by the butler.

INTERESTING READING MATTER.

Sir: Permit me to offer a suggestion as to what books one should take when kidnaped; I know of just two books that I can recommend as adequate: a bank book and a pocketbook. Now, that reminds me of a story (do you mind my being reminded?) about the kidnaping of a fiancier, who we will call Mr. Xyz for convenience.

The kidnapers forced Mr. Xyz to sign a check, payable to cash, for $40,000. Mr. Xyz was to be detained at the hide-out until the money should be safely in the kidnapers' hands. After a long two hours of waiting the kidnaper, who had gone to the bank, returned and silently handed Mr. Xyz a very flat envelope.

In it Mr. Xyz found his check, stamped N. S. F., and a memorandum which read: Mrs. Xyz has overdrawn the account to the amount of $24,000. Two notes at hand on this bank past due. The bank officials suggest that Mr. Xyz enter sufficient collateral to cover the deficit.

Mr. Xyz smiled joyously upon the assembled kidnapers. "Now, where is the man," he exclaimed, "who wouldn't say this is a swell time to be kidnaped?"

If you should wish to ask what good a bank book would be in a case like that, please don't ask me. THE GRAY FRIAR.

GOING TO SHAVE HIM TOO?

FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

16 YEARS AGO TODAY

MAY 9, 1915.

LONDON.—The latest information obtainable indicates that 1,214 men, women, and children perished in the destruction of the Lusitania by a German submarine on May 7. Of this number, 115 were American men, women, and children. There were 1,917 persons aboard the ship when the submarine smashed two torpedoes into the starboard side, literally tearing two great sections of the hull in pieces. Among the bodies of Americans which have been recovered and identified is that of Charles A. Plamondon of Chicago. No report has been received in regard to Mrs. Plamondon. The body of Charles Frohman, the New York theatrical producer, has been identified in the temporary morgue at the Queenstown town hall. There also lies the body of Dr. F. S. Pearson of New York, noted scientist and explorer. No trace has been found of Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt of New York and he is supposed to have been lost. Other Americans on the ship, including Elbert Hubbard of East Aurora, N. Y., editor of the Philistine, and his wife; Charles Klein, noted playwright, and Justus M. Forman, playwright and author, have not been found. Friends of Herbert S. Stone, formerly of Chicago, fear he is dead. His name is not on any list of survivors.

BERLIN.—The following official communication was issued today: "The Cunard liner Lusitania yesterday was torpedoed by a German submarine and sank. The Lusitania was naturally armed with guns, as were recently most of the English mercantile steamers. Moreover, as is well known here, it had large quantities of war material in its cargo. Its owners, therefore, knew to what danger the passengers were exposed. They alone bear all the responsibility for what has happened. Germany, on her part, left nothing undone to repeatedly and strongly warn them. The imperial ambassador in Washington even went so far as to make public warning so as to draw attention to this danger."

30 YEARS AGO TODAY

MAY 9, 1901.

NEW YORK.—The long predicted panic in the stock market came upon Wall street today. The break started shortly before 1 o'clock and when the market closed quotations had slumped anywhere from 1 to 20 points. Many fortunes made in the last six months were wiped out.

CHICAGO.—The crash in the New York stock market was responsible for the failure of Warren F. Furbeck & Co., stock brokers at 94 La Salle street. The slump in stocks came so suddenly that Mr. Furbeck was unable to secure extra margins quickly enough when they were demanded and he announced that he would be obliged to suspend. No statement of liabilities was obtainable.

LOS ANGELES.—President McKinley and his party reached this city after a notable daylight ride through the San Bernardino valley. He was welcomed to the state by Gov. Gage at Redlands.

EL PASO, Tex.—Charles G. Seymour, formerly managing editor of the Chicago Chronicle, died here of consumption. He had been an active newspaper man in Chicago for twenty years.

50 YEARS AGO TODAY

MAY 9, 1881.

TOPEKA, Kas.—The constitutional amendment prohibiting the manufacture or disposal of intoxicating liquor in any form in Kansas has been in effect a week. It is admitted by the prohibitionists that there will be many violations of the law. Even the fanatics are becoming quite liberal in their views of the act. The venerable Bishop Vail of Topeka refused to abolish wine at communion on the ground that it is sanctioned by a law higher than that of the state. An amendment allowing the use of wine for sacramental purposes was voted down in the legislature. The Topeka Distilling company is still operating, but is sending its product to other states. It claims it is protected in this by federal law.

VIENNA.—The festivities over the marriage of Prince Rudolph of Austria and Princess Stephanie of Belgium continue. A splendid state ball was given at the Hofburg last night.

GASOLINE TAXES.

Chicago, May 1.—I hasten to relieve the doubt expressed in your editorial on Illinois roads in this morning's TRIBUNE. House bill 407, sponsored by the Illinois Municipal league and embodying the 1-1-1 plan for the distribution of the use of gas tax revenues, definitely assures the expenditure of the money on state routes through cities until such time as those state routes are brought up to standard. If, after the state routes through cities have been taken care of, there is a remainder in the cities' motor fuel tax fund, it must next be used on streets adjacent to or auxiliary with state roads through cities. In other words, state routes must be given preferential attention, and after that, if there is any money left over, the cities may use it on other streets in towns which need it.

Your editorial also mentions the great discretionary power granted the department of public works and buildings. They have over fifty million dollars a year to spend, largely in the discretion of Messrs. Sheets, Cleaveland, and Emmerson. There is no appeal from their decision, and there are no adequate safeguards placed around their expenditure of this money. It has and will continue to be used, in many cases for several types of political purposes, not the least of which is to control votes in the general assembly in favor of administration measures which are in many cases inimical to the interests of the people in the cities of Illinois.

House bill 407, sponsored by the league, contains far greater safeguards around the proper expenditure of the money by city officials than are now imposed upon state officials and therefore relieves one of the weaknesses of the present system of centralization of power.

To centralize the control over the expenditure of fifty million dollars annually in one department, with no appeal from the decision of that department, creates a politically unsound condition for the welfare of the state. One need not be a prophet to foresee some of the alarming difficulties which the state is going to find itself in if it insists upon disregarding local sentiment and coming into our various cities and towns and taking control over the local street systems. A. D. MCLARTY, Secretary, Illinois Municipal League.

KOSCIUSZKO.

Chicago, May 7.—In response to Michael S. Jozaitl's question, "How long will the Polish people honor Thaddeus Kosciuszko?" I wish to inform him that always and ever will the Polish people honor and laud Thaddeus Kosciuszko, because he was a Pole and not a Lithuanian. The Lithuanians are rather late in their claim and have been very negligent in their praise of this great hero. If he was a Lithuanian, why have they never honored him, or do they think him unworthy of such laurels?

MRS. HARRIETTE KOLANOWSKA.

GANDHI.

Oak Park, Ill., May 5.—In my opinion your editorial Sunday on Mahatma Gandhi fails to drive home the outstanding truths and to emphasize the lessons that can be learned from India's struggle.

Gandhi is the voice of India—a powerful voice of more than three hundred million people—with a mind behind the voice capable of recognizing that history has proven that acquisitions by violence and physical force are sooner or later lost to the conqueror. Out of this evolves his campaign for freedom based on passive resistance and nonviolence. Without this wisdom future India would be uncertain, but this soul appeal must be heard and no power in the universe is strong enough to stop it.

We Americans are sympathetic, not simply because we once took the same step, nor because we always favor the so-called under dog, but rather because of that unmistakable connective link of universal brotherhood that runs through us all.

Industrial India hasn't had a chance, but if you can picture her with her population and China, her neighbor, with a greater population, gradually laying a foundation and developing higher standards of commercial civilization, you have not only found the underlying causes of worldwide depression but have realized the only road to recovery.

America is industrially supreme; India spiritually so. Industrial supremacy has risen and fallen; spiritual supremacy knows no superior. Americans seek their happiness on the outside material things; India looks inside to the real thing. What a nation we would be if our spiritual development had kept pace with us commercially.

There is nothing wrong with our institutions nor our institution of government. The whole is a sum of the parts but our difficulties begin when our people obey that impulse for material things and pleasures instead of developing toward moral and spiritual perfection.

The world would generally benefit if we would exchange with the east some of our industrial teachers for some of their spiritual ones. L. C. H.

SLEEPLESS SOUTH SHORE.

Chicago, May 6.—It is difficult to understand how health or city authorities permit an unbearable menace to health, a noise caused by cold saw cutting of steel beams in the new mills on the lake. Beginning at 10 o'clock each night, this noise, like riveting hammers on steel construction, seems just outside one's window for a radius of more than a mile, volume and radius increasing with the way of the wind. Sleep is rendered impossible, as the noise is continuous through night and morning.

It seems engineers of this organization capable of erecting these massive mills should be able to reduce the terrific noise or transfer operation to other shifts.

THE CLICK OF THE GATE

By Alice Campbell

SYNOPSIS.

Iris de Berthencourt lives in a remote section of Paris with her fifteen year old daughter, Clare. She and Maj. Alan Charnwood are desperately in love, but there are barriers to their immediate marriage. They are spending the last evening they will have together for several months, as Maj. Charnwood plans to leave the next day for Africa. Clare is acting in a school play and is to be brought home by friends.

Iris has been separated for years from her husband, Marcel de Berthencourt, a man of numerous charms but utterly lacking in moral sense. Iris and he are cousins and the godchildren of their Aunt Victoire, the Comtesse de Castelmauron. Iris plans to divorce her husband and marry Alan when he returns, but she is keeping her plans secret, as she wishes to avoid the interference of her tyrannical aunt, who has until recently ruled her life.

Iris receives a message that her aunt is on her way to see her. Alan leaves. The countess tells Iris that her husband's character has wholly changed and that he is desirous of resuming his duties as a husband and father. Just after the countess leaves Iris hears a motor stop in front of the house and hears Clare's friends bidding her good night.

Maj. Charnwood is just ready to leave his hotel when Iris calls him. He hurries to her home. The friends who drove Clare home tell Iris they left Clare at her door. Alan suggests Iris to notify the police, then they wait all night; but day breaks and Clare is still away. An inspector assigned to the case calls. He finds a photograph of a handsome Latin youth in Clare's desk. Iris calls her aunt, and Alan leaves to call on Mme. Roderick, the American woman in whose office Iris has been employed. Mme. Roderick refers to Clare's father as though she knows him well. She says she has known Clare's father for several months and that he's not as black as he's painted. She hasn't told Iris, as she didn't want to risk losing her friendship. When Alan returns to Iris' house he finds it closed. The maid tells him that Iris has gone to her aunt's. He tries unsuccessfully to see her there. The comtesse sees him, however, and dismisses him coolly. Alan is to leave the house an old servant approaches him with a message.

Marcel is already domiciled in the comtesse's home. When Iris learns of this she is inclined to feel resentment against her aunt for the deception.

INSTALLMENT XVIII.

PITY AND CONTEMPT.

Iris found herself noting the gray-blue shirt of silky texture, the trim, studied tie of a deeper shade threaded with a hairline of yellow, the crêpe de chine handkerchief, also gray-blue with a trace of yellow in the border, showing from his breast pocket, and thinking how these small items set the hallmark of distinction on an ensemble which—and this was remarkable in a Frenchman—had an air not contrived but accidental.

"May I smoke?"

Iris nodded indifferently. He offered her his case, then when she had refused flicked the cover from a gold lighter and shaded the flame with his well-kept hands. How different the latter were from those other hands she had noticed—was it in another life?—and thrilled to touch! Smaller, more shapely, without the least suggestion of ruggedness.

The flare lit up his features and she saw on the cheek turned towards her the three dusky pin points, scarcely to be called moles, which ages ago used to hold an odd fascination for her. Now she regarded them unmoved after reflecting that it needed only this to prove how little power he could exert over her now.

Inhaling deeply, he leaned his elbows on the chimney piece and stood looking down into the fire.

"I don't suppose you know that it is I who am managing all this business—the search for Clare."

"I don't suppose you know that it is I who am managing all this business —the search for Clare."

"Quite. But the police need direction, help," he replied, still with the air of quiet responsibility which struck her as strange. "The detective you interviewed this morning is said to be one of the ablest in France, but even he can't be left to find out everything for himself. He has to be told about the child's daily life, her friends, her pursuits. That sort of thing, and other details less pleasant, I am handling for you."

She frowned in affronted amusement.

"You! How can you know anything about Clare's life? You are completely ignorant of it."

She would have liked to add that his assistance was unwanted, but she could never bring herself to wound needlessly.

His silence annoyed her. She raised her eyes with an unspoken challenge, but still he did not combat her statement in so many words.

"Take, for a single example, these people, the Webers," he said after a pause. "Clare seems to have seen a good deal of them, yet who are they? Do you know?"

"I have met Mme. Weber," she returned shortly. "She is a kindly, harmless sort of woman."

He shrugged.

"Do you happen to be aware that she has a son of nineteen who doesn't bear a particularly savory reputation? Or that this bright youth has been sending secret notes to Clare, begging her to accompany him to théé dansants?"

She sat up, roused from her apathy.

"How do you know this? I refuse to believe it!" she cried with scorn.

"Nevertheless it is a fact." He waited for his assertion to sink in before continuing. "I fancy I could tell you many things about Clare which would be a revelation to you. Mothers are proverbially blind."

Her eyes flashed, she started to protest, but he checked her with a gentle movement.

"No, nothing wrong. Don't misunderstand. Only—well, young girls do not always confide in their mothers."

Her husband turned, saw her discomfiture.

"You are thinking about that other young man," he declared dispassionately. "We know now who it is—Armand Gilles, a juvenile actor at the Odéon. No doubt you've seen him on the stage."

So that was why the handsome face was so familiar! She swallowed her chagrin, but a hard edge crept into her voice as she said:

"And what conclusion do you draw from all this? Do you imagine that Clare's disappearance has any connection either with him or the Weber boy?"

Something broke in him suddenly, like the giving way of a dam.

"God knows!" he groaned, pressing his hand over his eyes. "God alone knows. But we shall find out," he went on, resolute again. "I have spent all day making inquiries, and the police inspector as well as the private agent are having both men shadowed. This state of things cannot last."

Iris' feeling wavered between a reluctant pity roused by his brief self-abandonment and resentful contempt at his assumption of authority. Yet, prejudiced as she was, she could not help seeing how deeply the affair had touched him. Perhaps there was good in his nature which could only be called forth by a bludgeon blow of fate.

What was this he was saying?

"It may be necessary, Iris, for us to confer now and then. Please understand I do not mean to trouble you more than is absolutely required. You won't object?"

She bowed her head.

"No—naturally not."

"My one thought is to spare you. As you know, the police are putting a dragnet over Paris, indeed over the whole of France. But I wonder if you realize—I may as well put it bluntly—that there is a recognized chance of its proving to be suicide?"

"Not that!" She shrank as though he had struck her.

He made an instinctive gesture of compassion, quickly checked.

"I, for my part, cannot believe it. Why, she was too light-hearted, too full of spontaneous gayety, ever to have harbored such a thought! It's fantastic. Could she have joked about her acting in "Athalie," planned a frock for one of her school friends, laughed at——"

He stopped, confused. Accusation flared at him from his wife's eyes.

"How do you know all this? You don't mean you saw Clare on Tuesday? She was with you?"

She knew the answer before he spoke.

"Why should it distress you?" he answered simply. "Yes, I have seen Clare, not once but often. What right have you to object? She is my daughter as well as yours."

Now she understood the child's timid efforts at peacemaking, her veiled questions about the father she pretended not to know. Poor, ignorant Clare! No doubt she had invested him with all the trappings of romance, just as Iris, had done, at the age of seventeen. He had fascinated her, won her allegiance.

Once more she felt a raging anger against her aunt, who, working underground to achieve her cherished purpose, had not scrupled to bring the father and daughter together. For a second she hated the scheming old woman with consuming fury. Interference, secret machinations! Of was her life never to be her own, to do with as she saw fit?

Then, as suddenly as it had risen, the flame of resentment was quenched by misery. She leaned back in her chair, engulfed by anguish which sucked her down, down to the depths.

Clare was lost, gone; no one, not even her aunt, knew where. What were all these petty grievances now but so many ripples on the surface of a bottomless despair?

Washington Site for Proposed Plant.

Washington, D. C., May 2.—(AP)—Happy endings in celluloid grand opera were espoused today by Miss Alice A. Driggs, leader of a movement for an American museum of musical art and industry.

"It is my intention that the institution commission companies to produce opera in movies, with fresh young American voices, and with happy endings," Miss Driggs said.

Col. U. S. Grant III., director of public buildings and parks, has shown Miss Driggs three sites available for the institution she proposes. She will ask congress to set aside one of them during next music week, a year from now.

Original plans are for a $5,000,000 outlay. Whether funds will be raised by private subscription or be sought from congress, she said her backers had not decided.

"Taking the murder and suicide out of opera is a natural development," Miss Driggs said. "It is necessary to go through the dramatic episodes to get dramatic music, but after the listener has gone through all the agony, he ought to have a happy ending and not start home feeling like he'd been to a funeral!"

The institution is intended to "preserve and teach the history, science, art, and utility of music, by museum methods and visual instruction." It would also sponsor legitimate grand opera—with endings unchanged.

"The movement will succeed," Miss Driggs said. "Music is taught in every high school and in 232 colleges, but we have no museum to which music students can go to learn as art students in museums."

"JOURNALISM," SAYS SHAW, "GOD HELP IT!" LONDON TOAST

LONDON, May 8.—(AP)—For ten minutes today Bernard Shaw entertained the British Institute of Journalists, closing a characteristic speech with the toast, "The professio. of journalism—God help it."

"Is it a profession," he demanded, "or is it the last refuge of any young person who is hopelessly illiterate and hopelessly inaccurate?"

One of journalism's difficult problems, he said, is to eliminate the time lag—the inability to recognize that a thing has happened when it has happened.

"Most people," he said, "take about twenty years to realize that something has happened. The world has not yet realized that the Russian revolution has taken place. The British press has not yet found out that the soviet union has come to stay. In consequence we have thrown away one of the most magnificent commercial chances we can ever hope to see in our lifetime."

Of the European situation Shaw said:

"Don't start a time lag about the Austro-German customs union. They are bound to unite, not only in a customs union but nationally."

He then took a hop, skip and jump over the past, present and future of the world in the course of which he said George Washington may have been the most terrible scoundrel who ever lived, but the American revolution occurred and Great Britain had to admit it.

Shaw urged newspapermen not to deal with world events like an old-fashioned governess in an old-fashioned cathedral town. In classifying himself solely as a journalist he said:

"I am not one of those men of letters who devote their lives to saying things beautifully, without any particular regard as to what they are saying. What I have got to do is to tell people about life and about themselves. There I stop. I am a journalist."

University of Missouri Gives Journalism Awards.

Columbia, Mo., May 2.—(AP)—Medals of honor for distinguished service in journalism were awarded by the school of journalism at the University of Missouri here today to an American newspaper, a foreign journal, and three individuals—an alumnus of the school, a Missouri publisher, and an executive editor of distinction.

The Baltimore Sun, represented at the ceremonies by its managing editor, William E. Moore, and the Manchester (England) Guardian, represented by A. Wyn Williams, its American correspondent, were the newspapers honored.

The honorary degree of doctor of laws was conferred upon Chao-Chu Wu, Chinese minister to the United States, by the University of Missouri today.

Calls Lincoln Failure in His Peace Efforts

Oregon Professor Talks to London Audience.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, May 8.—Lincoln's lost causes, both the settlement of slavery and the preservation of the union "by intelligence and good will" were the subject of an address by Prof. Edward Sisson of Reed college, Portland, Ore., today. He talked at London university.

His address was preceded by an introduction by Ambassador Charles G. Dawes. Mr. Dawes recalled that his own impressions of Lincoln had been picked up from the President's Illinois friends, notably from Gov. R. J. Oglesby. "Only Oglesby of Illinois gave me the impression of the great stature of Lincoln," Ambassador Dawes asserted. "He was not only a man of great kindness as depicted to school boys, but he was a man of tremendous force and of great strength and energy."

Prof. Sisson started with the assertion that Lincoln was overpraised. The causes of the civil war, he said, were the abolition of slavery and the preservation of the union, but Lincoln disapproved of war.

"Lincoln's causes were the solution of those problems by intelligence and good will, and both these methods failed," Sisson declared, citing Lincoln's second annual message to congress. That, he declared, was the greatest state paper the emancipator ever wrote. Although the war was a year old, Lincoln insisted on pronouncing his beliefs despite popular hostility that the two problems should be settled without bloodshed; that the slave owners were entitled to compensation, and that the New England vessel owners had insisted on keeping up the slave trade while the south was protesting hopelessly. These sentiments were anathema to abolitionists, but Lincoln held to his causes, even though he had already lost, the professor said.

Charter Members of Red Cross Invited to Celebrate May 21

Washington, D. C., May 8.—(AP)—A vivacous white haired, brown eyed woman, Mrs. Emma L. Degraw of Washington, responded today to the Red Cross roll call of fifty-one persons who signed its constitution fifty years ago.

John Barton Payne, Red Cross chairman, immediately invited her to occupy a position of honor at the May 21 golden jubilee banquet. There President Hoover will be ranking guest and speaker. Mrs. Degraw accepted. In fact, she whimsically confessed the early Red Cross meant more to her for its sociability than for its disaster relief, and she saw Clara Barton, the organization's founder, in the rôle of perfect hostess, rather than savior of the suffering.

Mayor Cermak Sets May 12 as Day to Aid Hospital Patients

Mayor A. J. Cermak issued a proclamation yesterday designating May 12 as national hospital day and urging the citizens to "give thought to the contribution of service made by the alleviation of human suffering."

"I do hereby proclaim May 12, 1931, as national hospital day and call upon all of our citizens to pause and consider the spirit and purpose of the commemoration of the birthday of Florence Nightingale, the great humanitarian," the mayor stated, "and to take advantage of the opportunity offered by our splendid hospitals in Chicago of learning more of the nature of the work they are rendering the sick and the unfortunate in Chicago."

Eighteen national programs will be broadcast on hospital day, came the announcement from Miss Veronica Miller, superintendent of Henrotin Memorial hospital and chairman of the radio and publicity activities for the day. Among these will be W-G-N, The Tribune's station on the Drake hotel, over which a talk by Dr. Morris Fishbein will be broadcast this evening at 7 o'clock. Arrangements for the radio programs were made by Carlton Coon, orchestra leader.

Saving of Life on Mother's Day Given as Ideal

Infant Welfare Chief Tells of Death Rates.

A plea was voiced yesterday to increase the significance of Mother's day to include public attention to the "appalling waste of mothers' lives and the need of adequate maternity care."

The Infant Welfare society of Chicago, speaking through Philip D. Armour, its president, declared that fully two-thirds of the annual maternal death toll and thousands of infant lives as well might be saved.

"The highest homage to mothers today is to provide for the conservation of their health through modern medical science," said Mr. Armour. "This year the observance of Mother's day is to have an added factor of practical usefulness. Public spirited men and women everywhere will join in emphasizing the fact that 16,000 of the 16,000 mothers who die each year due to childbirth need not die if they are given the proper care.

"The United States is the only country in the world which officially sets aside a day on which to honor motherhood, and yet the death rate from maternity causes in this country is the highest in the civilized world."

The maternity death rate per 1,000 live births in the United States, Mr. Armour stated, is 6.5. That's higher than Canada, England and Wales, Denmark, and the Netherlands. The Chicago death rate of mothers is 4.7, while that among those aided by the Infant Welfare society is only 2.2, he said. That difference, he added, is due to the adequate maternity care given by the society's stations throughout this city.

In fraternal groups, church and civic organizations plans were completed yesterday for the expression of tributes to the mothers of the United States. The Chicago lodge of Elks will have its meeting at the Grand Opera house, 119 North Clark street, tomorrow at 3 p. m. Dr. Herman N. Bundesen will deliver the address and the musical program will be furnished by the radio artists of W-G-N, The Tribune's station on the Drake hotel.

The cadets of the Morgan Park Military academy will parade in honor of their mothers at 3 p. m. tomorrow. A half hour before the parade the mothers will gather at the academy gymnasium to be presented with flowers by the cadets.

A special display of flowers that mother loves will be arranged tomorrow in the show room and horticulture hall at Garfield park conservatory from 8 a. m. to 6 p. m. There will be vivid slipperwort, the conservatory's own hybrid schizanthus, or butterfly flower, as well as the choicest flowers from the old-fashioned garden.

The Drexel Park Presbyterian church, 64th street and Marshfield avenue, will have a Mother's day services morning and evening, and a pageant, "Silver Threads," will be presented by the junior choir.

Sorority affairs for Mother's day include:

Alpha chapter of Kappa Omega Chi's dinner and card party at the Lincolnshire Country club.

Three chapters of Delta Kappa Delta sorority will give a luncheon and bridge party for mothers of members today at the Medinah Athletic club.

Mother songs of other lands, as well as those of long ago, will be a feature of the Mother's day tea which the juniors and members of the young woman's branch will give at the Woman's City club tomorrow afternoon. Miss Margaret Gregson and Miss R. Ella Ray are in charge of the tea.

Students Win Poster Contest for State Fair

J. Sterling Morton High school pupils yesterday carried off both first prizes in the state fair poster contest conducted at the administration building in Lincoln park, and one honorable mention. The governor's cup for the best poster in class A, depicting the veterans' day celebration during the state fair, went to Caroline Sorlizga, and that for the general fair festivities to Henry Sima of Berwyn. The cups will be presented later. Joseph Novak of Cicero, the third Morton pupil to win acclaim, received second honorable mention in the B class.

First place among the honorable mentions for the general fair poster was awarded to Paul Rohloff of Forest Park, a student at the Proviso Township High school. In class A, Gustave Falkenberg was first and Robert Gramate second in the honorable mention list. Both boys are Chicagoans and pupils of the Waller High school. More than 100 students competed in the finals, but many were eliminated in various contests held, the best posters of which were entered in the finals.

Judges were Paul Ressinger, Frank H. Young, director of the Academy of Art, and Miss Zoe Reeves, advertising manager. They were highly commendatory on the amount of art talent displayed among the public and parochial pupils participating.

The state fair will be held at Springfield Aug. 22 to 29, veterans' day activities being scheduled for Aug. 23.

Parents' Letters Provide a Cross Section of Life

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS

"Don't you ever get tired of reading letters about people's thoughts and troubles?" writes one of my correspondents, who had just put up to me a most difficult problem.

Do I ever tire? Could I ever tire of reading these letters? These letters from groping fathers of motherless children, trying to be both father and mother. Letters from fond, indulgent, bewildered young mothers, asking why their beautiful baby is so hard to manage. Letters from shy young men who admit a great love for babies, and from shy young women who are saving my articles against the time when they may need them. Letters from foster parents, filled with an almost devout love for their adopted children.

Letters from working mothers supporting large families, unconscious of their courage and fortitude. Letters from anxious mothers of mismanaged children, who are hurt and worried by the way their children behave. Letters from fond grandmothers whose grandchildren are perfect. Letters from confused young boys and girls, wanting to be set right on this most important matter of sex education. Letters from young wives who are trying to bring up their children with the unwanted help of grandfather, grandmother, Aunt Susie and Uncle Bill, with father on the opposing team!

I have received letters from unschooled women that, written out of a full heart, were really pieces of literature. And a few scolding ones from stern mothers and fathers who feel that the newer ways with children are all tosh. And such tender and anxious ones from adoring mothers who wonder what can be the matter with their so obviously spoiled darlings.

My correspondence is like a slice of life—a cross section not only of parenthood alone, but the whole substance of life—pain and sorrow, failure and success, joy and grief, love and loss—all those things out of which is woven the fabric of life.

"Don't you ever get tired of reading letters about people's thoughts and troubles?"

A thousand times "No."

Janet Chase, Fred Hauck to Wed Today

BY THALIA

WEATHER reports were of pretty all-absorbing interest in the Samuel Chase household last night and early this morning. With proper encouragement from the elements plans will go ahead to have the wedding in the garden, but if it looks like rain Miss Janet Chase and Frederick Hauck will plight their troth indoors.

The wedding service, to be read by the Rev. Herbert Prince, will take place—whether it be in or out—this afternoon, and is to be a family affair. The bride's two nieces, Mary and Barbara Boyden, daughters of Mrs. Polly Chase Boyden, are to "stand up" with their aunt, and besides them there will be no other attendants. The guests will number about a hundred. Mr. Hauck's mother, Mrs. Charles Frederick Hauck, was unable to come on from California for the wedding. Mr. Hauck and his bride are to set off on a motor trip, going almost immediately to Pittsburgh, where they are to live.

Two Daughters Born to the Younger Piries.

Mr. and Mrs. John T. Pirie Jr. and Mr. and Mrs. Robert S. Pirie are being congratulated upon the births of daughters on Wednesday, May 6, at the Presbyterian hospital. Mrs. John T. Pirie is the former Daisianna Smith and Mrs. Robert was Miss Betty Borden before her marriage.

The Lighthouse Volunteer Aids' dance at the Bal Tabarin this evening is the last of the town affairs for the season of 1930-'31. Despite the fact that the committees have been hampered in one way and another [Mrs. Clifford Templeton, the president, was taken ill at the very beginning of the preparations, and although she will be at the party for half an hour or so, she isn't herself yet, and besides many of the girls have been out of town] the party promises to be large and gay. Giving dinner parties before the dance will be Marion Olcott, who is to have a dozen guests; Mrs. Stanley Merrill, Mrs. Alice R. Boswell, the B. Rotsford Youngs, Jeanette Peterkin, the Tracy Turners Jr., and Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Caldwell.

W. C. Whitcombs to Give Reception for Daughter.

The William Card Whitcombs are going to give a belated wedding reception for their daughter, Georgiana, who has been Mrs. Latham Castle since a week ago yesterday, and Mr. Castle, on Saturday afternoon, May 11, at their apartment at 1500 Lake Shore drive. The Whitcombs are having a family dinner party tomorrow for Mr. Castle, his mother, Mrs. John B. Castle of Sandwich, Ill., and other relatives from out of town.

Out of town—Mr. and Mrs. Edward N. Hurley were given a dinner party by Mr. and Mrs. Fred A. Britten in Washington t'other night. . . . Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick is a boxholder for the society horse show at the Presco Riding club in Washington today. . . . Mrs. George Taylee Langhorne and her mother, Mrs. Edward Waller, have been at White Sulphur, as also have the Charles B. Pliss. . . . Col. and Mrs. A. A. Sprague are expected at the Springs next week.

Renee Thornton, the former Mrs. Richard Hageman, who has gone into the beauty business, is here for some lectures, and there are several parties being given for her during her stay. Mrs. Raymond Redheffer gave a luncheon at the Arts club for her yesterday, and Mr. and Mrs. Redheffer are to give a dinner this evening at their apartment. The John R. Mauffs entertained at dinner last night, and Mrs. George T. Leach is having a luncheon at the Woman's Athletic club today.

Various Parties, Including One Given by Ralph M. Shaw.

Party-going and giving—It is to be imagined that the conversation at Ralph Martin Shaw's dinner party at the Casino Thursday night was "all wet" because the host and guests are all interested in prohibition amendment. The party was for Henry Curran of New York and Julian Codman of Boston, and the Chicagoans included the Charles Garfield Kings, the Robert Dunhams, the Leslie Wheelers, the Russell Forgans, and so forth. . . . Preston Boyden had a dinner party first part of the week at the Tavern for Thorne Donnelley and his bride, who everybody says is perfectly lovely looking. . . . Mrs. John Dinsle of Evanston is to give a luncheon at the Drake today for Miss Virginia Ericsson, whose marriage to Raymond Olsen is to take place at St. Chrysostom's a week from Tuesday.

Guess what—Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick's tulips have been blooming for several days now (the flower beds have yellow ones in the center and borders of bright scarlet and the ones in the urns on each side of the doorway are sunny yellow). . . . Miss Marian Taylor, daughter of the Samuel Gale Taylors, and Dr. Douglas Boyd are to be married on June 6 at St. James's. . . . Harriet Lowden Madlener is to be the piano soloist at the Chicago Woman's club's Sunday concert tomorrow. . . . Recent sojourners at French Lick included the Otto W. Lehmanns, Mrs. A. D. Plamondon, and the A. D. Jrs. . . . There were a lot of family parties for Mrs. John R. Bigelow (Helen Farnum) while she was in town for the last week (she and her mother, Mrs. Henry W. Farnum, departed Thursday for the east, to tarry for a visit in Dayton, O., before going on to New York). Mrs. Farnum is to open the summer place at Magnolia on the 19th.

Copies of "Distinguished Hostesses," the Woman's National Republican club's cook book de luxe, will be table prizes for the card party to be given by the club at the Opera club a week from next Tuesday afternoon. Mrs. George W. Shaw is chairman of arrangements and Miss Marcia Foss co-chairman.

ENGAGEMENT

Mr. and Mrs. George M. Van Sweringen of 1571 Ridge avenue, Evanston, announce the engagement of their daughter, Virginia, to George Kenneth Budd, son of Mrs. Charles D. Budd of Glencoe.

ENGAGED

MISS GWENDOLYN FEENEY.

Announcement has been made of the engagement of Miss Gwendolyn Feeney, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sifton J. Feeney of 54 East Elm street, to Charles Sidney Stevens, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. Henry Stevens of Ogden, Utah. Miss Feeney was graduated from the Chicago Latin school and attended Ogontz. Mr. Stevens attended the University of Utah. The wedding will take place in June.

CHAPLIN HAS SCIATICA; HE CAN'T LAUGH THAT AWAY; SEEKING REST

JUAN LES PINS, France, May 8.—(AP)—Charlie Chaplin today declined to comment on a story printed in a London newspaper that he had refused a royal command invitation to appear at a benefit vaudeville performance which the king and queen planned to attend.

It was reported here the grounds for his refusal to appear in London were that he had another engagement. At present the American film comedian is busy negotiating for a villa here. He is suffering from sciatica.

Chaplin plans to leave soon for a tour and then will return to the Riviera.

Higher Quality of Students Urged for the Universities

A more rigid selection of students admitted to institutions of higher learning, both for the sake of the universities and for the students, was advised last night by President Alexander G. Ruthven of the University of Michigan.

President Ruthven and United States Senator James Hamilton Lewis were guest speakers at the annual meeting and dinner of the Michigan Alumni club of Chicago.

"Not higher scholastic requirements, but a more careful selection of students is our need," President Ruthven said. "Complaints of the slowing up of the educational process with the admission of unqualified students are justified, but of more import is the psychological effect failure has on the student."

WASHINGTON SOCIETY

Washington, D. C., May 8.—[Special.]—President and Mrs. Hoover had the delegates to the meeting of the American Law institute and their wives at 5 o'clock tea this afternoon in the White House. An hour earlier Mrs. Hoover entertained Mrs. Edwin Thompson, wife of the mayor of Liverpool, and Mrs. Edward J. Higgins, wife of the international head of the Salvation Army, also at the White House. They were accompanied by Lady Lindsay, wife of the British ambassador.

The French ambassador and Mme. Claudel gave a tea this afternoon in the embassy for the French delegates to the International Chamber of Commerce.

Fashions for Brides Favor Pinks, Whites

BY VIRGINIA GARDNER.

Two hundred prospective brides gathered yesterday to see models display the latest bridal raiment and to compare notes on whether they favored face or nose veils, or whether halo effects were more becoming, and whether they really ought to flout tradition and marry in pink or yellow or blue instead of white.

"I know it's very new," one bride-to-be said to another, viewing the pink satin gown and tulle veil in halo effect which one dark eyed model wore at Marshall Field & Co.'s fifth floor. "But it's somehow shocking to me to see a bride in anything but white."

"You'd know every one in the church would be talking about it," the other replied, "but I do love that—the pink, I mean."

Preceding the pink bride were a bridesmaid and matron of honor, both in pink. The latter wore clinging pink lace. The bridesmaid, a blond young woman with tip-tilted nose, wore a lei of blue cornflowers around her shoulders. That garland is what Hawaiian maidens wear at fiestas. The blue contrasted with the pale pink chiffon dress, which had a low cowl collar in front and back, and which fitted her closely to the hips, when it flared out over dark blue taffeta.

As an orchestra played the "Lohengrin" wedding march, two small girls appeared in yellow organdy, with organdy mits for gloves, and green bows and girdles making them look like daffodils, the audience of brides excitedly rose to make sure they were missing nothing. All the bridesmaids and other attendants wore wide brimmed straw hats trimmed with green bows and carried a single calla lily.

The bride who followed wore white faille silk after Lanvin, a Paris designer, and gazed from behind a pointed face veil. No bride of 1831 could appear more feminine, more bridal.

"I'm certainly going to insist my bridesmaids wear one petticoat each, if not two," one girl was heard to remark.

When the all-white wedding made its appearance, one future bride whispered to another that the all-white wedding was, if anything, smarter than the all-pink or all-green or all-yellow wedding.

The fashion show bride wore a heavy white chiffon dress with a cape collar, and a train edged with a wide band of white feathers. A white chiffon veil, very short, was held in place by a bandeau of smooth white feathers. Her bridesmaids and flower girls were in white, carrying little muffs of white feathers.

The bride's trousseau clothes were modeled, too, and included such things as a semi-formal gown of flame colored flat crêpe whose skirt was white; a brown lace dress over printed chiffon, worn with a tulle turban of chartreuse, matched by a satin sash, and a brown suit of heavy georgette. Red was a prominent color in the bride's trousseau. One costume was a red blouse and plaited skirt of heavy georgette, with white insets in the sleeves, and a red patent leather belt, worn with a white hat of porte-bonheur straw with the new four-inch brim.

Among the prospective brides present were Miss Sarah Wood, Miss Ghita Watson, Miss Elsa Armour, and Miss Edna Mae Tubbs.

Miss Lelia Withers and Miss Ann Elizabeth Walsh, debutantes of last season, also attended.

Young Archduke to Wed Canadian Girl, He Says

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

VIENNA, Austria, May 8.—The young Archduke Leopold Salvator recently acquitted in New York on a charge of an illegal safe of the famous necklace of the Archduchess Maria Theresa, has become engaged to a Canadian, Miss Alice Gibson Coburn, now a resident of New York. Salvator, who returned to Vienna from New York in March, stated tonight: "I met the lady in Paris when returning to Vienna from America recently. We probably will be married in Paris within three months, where we intend to live." Leopold's elder brother, Archduke Anton Von Hapsburg, recently became engaged to the Rumanian Princess Ileana.

Tests Reveal Children Sleep Better in Winter

Children sleep soundly for a longer length of time on winter nights than on summer nights as an average, but a decrease in the amount of sleep occurs in the middle of winter, probably due to lack of ultra-violet rays in midwinter sunshine. That conclusion was made in a paper presented by Dr. C. R. Garvey of the Yale Institute of Human Relations at a meeting of the Midwest Psychological association in the social science building of the University of Chicago yesterday.

Walk Out When She Turns on Tears, Doris Tells Chap

BY DORIS BLAKE.

"I am a young man, 27, madly in love with a girl seven years my junior. She says she loves me, but here's what I'm up against with her. She's always doubting me. But if I say something, in jest, she'll begin crying, and acts like a regular cry baby, saying I don't love her or I wouldn't say such awful things.

"MARCEL."

You are taking a spoiled little girl to raise, Marcel. I think you'd better start the disciplining right away. Anyway, get her over the cry baby habit before marriage, for that is awfully trying after you're wed. Walk out on the next wet scene. Stay out, too, until the tears are thoroughly dried and the nose powdered. In case you don't know it, that's a bullying racket indulged in by a certain type of girl. And you know you've got to be a bit rugged when you're handling her kind. One or two nonsuccessful crying scenes usually works effectively enough for future comfort.

But about this 'doubting' business employed by certain young women. Recently I was in a few hours' company with a young couple in love, most obviously. The young man was rather quiet, serious and fine. The girl's idea of entertainment was to bully and rag the young fellow unmercifully. She injected that "doubting" phase into the occasion until you wanted to shake her.

"Teasing," she probably interpreted it. But every statement from the young man provoked a volley of doubts and silly questions. Nothing was meant, of course. It was just poor taste, with the girl, not the boy, the victim in others' eyes. Perhaps it is just a way girls have of not wanting to appear publicly crazy about their young men, and so indulge in this belittling performance. That's what it amounts to, to outsiders, anyway.

There's nothing to be ashamed of in liking a fine, upstanding boy, nor in showing it in a nice, dignified way. The habit of "ragging" isn't a nice one to cultivate. It's dangerous. Some day it may turn you into a married nagger. And that's not a nice thing to be.

DORIS BLAKE ANSWERS

Type to Avoid.

"Dear Miss Blake: What do you think of a girl who pries into your private affairs and has a tongue that believes in perpetual motion?

"SHADOW."

RURAL MINDED RECTOR IS CALLED MISFIT FOR PULPIT IN BIG CITIES

New York, May 8.—(AP)—The commission on ministry of the Episcopal church will recommend to the triennial general convention in Denver, Sept. 16, that the canon law be changed so that bishop and parish share alike in the selection of a rector, it announced today.

The commission's report will say that a "white collar class" exists in the clergy and that "hit-an-miss" selection is harming both church and pastor.

Under the present system, the commission will say, parishes select a rector without regard for his individual fitness, efficiency or ability. As a result a pastor with a "rural" mind often finds himself in charge of a Metropolitan church and city bred men must lead urban flocks, the commission says.

The commission's report says of the present plan "prestige, favoritism and stupidity frequently prevail over merit and fitness. The present system results in unrest, dissatisfaction and injury to church work."

Grand Rapids Surgeon Is Named Michigan U. Regent

Lansing, Mich., May 8.—[Special.]—Dr. Richard Root Smith, Grand Rapids, prominent surgeon and one of the founders of the American College of Surgeons, was appointed today by Gov. Wilber M. Brucker as a regent of the University of Michigan. He succeeded Dr. Walter H. Sawyer, Hillsdale, who died suddenly last week.

EMBARRASSING MOMENTS

No Fare for Extras.

I met my girl friend after a show and found that there were three more girls with her.

As we got on the street car the girls all walked in and took seats. As I reached for my change I found that I had 20 cents. The conductor then went in the car and collected the girls' fare.

Was I embarrassed! L. M.

Subtle Blackening of the Eyelashes Is Flattering to Many

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

Women are divided in several different groups in their attitude toward beauty. Some there are who never hear of a new trick that isn't immediately attached and tried. Some have occasional spurts of going after themselves. And others again, a soap and water variety, I call them, can't be bothered with any of the wiles other than perhaps a dab of powder and a bit of color on cheek and lip.

I suppose we all arrive at the same quiet little resting place, eventually, under a mound of sod and grass. But those who aren't too scornful of the feminine wiles while they're young may have a lot better time. And, as the art is practiced today, it doesn't interfere with the hope of salvation.

I'm thinking of eyelash treatment, particularly. Possibly a bit of the old prejudice still attaches itself to this branch of the beautifying industry. But the reason is not in eyelash treatment, but in the crudity of its practice, as a rule.

Now, here's one trick you've got to promise yourself to be past master of before you step outside your door. In its poor application you jeopardize your reputation as a sweet, kind girl as you can do with no other cosmetic item. The wrong coloring on those eyelashes of yours, the heavy hand used—and beauty is lost. But if you master the technique of applying a touch of makeup to the lashes you've done something really charming to your eyes. A certain glamor and sparkle to the eye is gained, or an alluring softness, or a little enlargement is lent the eye.

For the upper lashes, tilt the head back so that the lashes stand out. Gently stroke them with the small brush from root to rip, upwards to curl them. Start the application with the center lashes and let the coloring be heavier at the tips than the roots, but in no spot heavy. For the lower lashes, bend the head forward and stroke the lashes from root to tip.

Get an extra good light on your work. And apply your blackening sparingly.

BEAUTY ANSWERS

MISS T. L.: THE AIR IN THE room in which you work should be constantly changing. Lower the windows from the top and open from the bottom. Warm air ascends and the cold air from below sweeps out poisonous gases laden with injurious organic matter. You must breathe fresh air.

FARM AND GARDEN

BY PAUL POTTER

FARM BY-PRODUCTS.

Possibilities of immense industries which some day may be able to use the quantities of materials now described as farm wastes are seen by scientists. They are studying what might be done with the millions of tons of waste fibers that annually are produced on farms in the United States.

Estimates by Dr. W. W. Skinner of the United States department of agriculture are that 100,000,000 tons of cornstalks grow each year in the corn producing areas in America; 115,000,000 tons of cereal straws; corncobs, 20,000,000 tons; cotton stalks, 12,000,000 tons; oat hulls, 3,000,000 tons; flax straw, 2,200,000 tons; cottonseed hulls, 1,800,000 tons; sugar cane bagasse, 500,000 tons, and peanut hulls, 70,000 tons.

The approximate composition of these materials is said to be 40 per cent cellulose; lignin, 20 per cent, and hemicellulose or carbohydrates, 30 per cent.

Because cellulose is the material from which paper, rayon and similar products are manufactured, importance is attached to the possibilities of the by-products that now largely are wasted. Dr. Skinner announces however, that at present it has not been determined if it is possible to make profitable use of the cornstalks and straw. In addition to the basic value placed by the farmer on them for fertilization, manufacturers would need to add cost of collection, transportation, concentration, and probably storage.

Bright Sayings of the Children

Daddy was showing his little girl, aged 4, how to count on her fingers.

"Now," he said, "this little finger is one, next is two, three, four, and this is five."

"O, no," said Isobel, "that's my thumb." H. J. C.

Mother—Bobby, why are you sitting there when you ought to be in bed?

Bobby—There's a mosquito in my room.

Mother—It hasn't bitten you, has it, darling?

Separate Coat Means Varied Ensembles

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

PARIS.—[Special.]—The top coat is an important item of the fashionable wardrobe this spring, which is all to the good of the pocketbook, for with one carefully chosen separate coat you can make yourself a number of different ensembles.

Chanel, Patou, Lanvin, to mention only a few of the great Paris couturiers, are all making quite a feature of separate coats in shantung, faille, satin or fine wool. These coats are furless and often collarless, when they are worn with separate fur or fabric scarves. Vionnet shows many afternoon coats in black crêpe with collar and cuffs of snowy ermine.

Bruyère has perfectly stunning separate coats that strike a golden mean between formality and sports, which makes them eminently wearable for a great many occasions. She favors eyelet embroidery trimmings that accent the architectural lines of the coat quite cleverly.

Even newer are her quilted designs which are used to decorate the Bruyère top coat, sketched today. It's in fine lacquer red wool with a full length skirt flared toward the front. The sleeves, cut in one with the fronts and the back, have a seam running down the outside of the arm outlined by a quilted pattern.

The collar descends in a deep triangle in front and is also outlined by the quilting. It may be worn buttoned up, as you see on the large figure. The buttonhole is surrounded by a large quilted daisy. The collar is edged inside with the quilting, which shows when it is worn turned down with the reveres open. There's a wide belt of the red wool.

Food Talk.

There are many housewives who are not acquainted with more than one kind of vinegar. Some purchase it without making any specifications, while others request cider vinegar. By the United States standards cider or apple vinegar is understood when the word vinegar is used without any qualification.

Cider vinegar is one of the most excellent of vinegars, but there are others that have a very pleasing flavor. Tarragon vinegar is ordinary vinegar which contains the flavor of tarragon leaves. Garlic vinegar is vinegar that has absorbed the flavor from the cloves of garlic. Nasturtium vinegar is one into which has been put nasturtium seeds to add flavor. Eschallot vinegar is one that has the flavor of shallot incorporated in it. Then there is wine vinegar, which adds an exquisite flavor to salad dressings.

Wine or grape vinegar is made from either red or white wines. It is red when made from the former and champagne when made from the latter. Wine vinegar can be substituted for wine in any cooking recipe. Such substitution is a time honored and established practice.

Malt vinegar is obtained from a fermented malt infusion. It is brown in color and smells something like beer It is especially nice for pickling, and many cooks prefer it for general table purposes.

Other commercial vinegars are sugar, glucose, and spirit vinegar. The first is made by the fermentation of sugar or molasses. The second from corn sirup or corn sugar, and the third from dilute alcohol.

If conditions are just right any one can make good vinegar at home by simply exposing wine, beer, cider, etc., to the air for the acetifying bacteria to have a chance to do their work. Of course, the home made product rarely compares with that put up by the first class manufacturer. Vinegar needs a good deal of care to keep it in the best condition. Exposure to air, strong light, or extreme cold will cause it to deteriorate.

The acidity of vinegars vary. Some vinegars contain considerable acid, while others are much milder and more aromatic.

MACEDOINE SALAD.

Line a large salad bowl with lettuce. In the center place a mound of tiny string beans. Around the beans arrange a neat ring of diced ripe tomatoes and small sections of flowers of cauliflower, diced beets, and diced asparagus. Many other vegetable combinations may be used. Serve at the table with French dressing on nests of crisp lettuce leaves.

CHIFFONADE SALAD.

Line a bowl with lettuce and break in small pieces of chicory and romaine, short and long pieces of julienned celery and quartered or eighted peeled ripe tomatoes. Garnish sides of bowl with rosettes of cress. Pour over a chiffonade dressing.

BEAUTIFUL—AND NOT SO DUMB

THE modern girl holds many a trick in her wise little head. She has a shrewd sense of line and color. With deft strokes she accents her good points. And she has learned that good health is the foundation of all natural beauty.

A lovely skin, lively eyes and radiant youth are not things that can be bought at any price. For these are the outward signs of a body that is healthy within.

One of the most treacherous enemies of health is constipation. Its poisons undermine beauty. Skins turn to a sickly yellow. Eyes lose their sparkle. Pimples appear. Headaches, dizziness, spells of depression become frequent.

Constipation usually results from lack of roughage in the diet. Today, you can obtain this vital element in a delicious, non-fattening cereal: Kellogg's ALL-BRAN. Two tablespoonfuls daily will prevent and relieve both temporary and recurring constipation. How much safer than using dangerous pills and drugs!

FIRST DRILL SHOWS SKILL OF FRENCH FIGHTERS

WELTER CHAMP SHADED BY LEFT HAND ATTACK

Levinsky, Dublinsky, Delmont Win.

Bucky Lawless, an Irishman from Ashers, N. Y., with an ingratiating grin, whipped Young Jack Thompson, welterweight champion of the world, last night at the Stadium. But Thompson, who recently regained the title from Tommy Freeman, still is rated officially the best fighter in his division.

Lawless' hard earned decision didn't stunt. For with a champion's prerogatives when he either fears his opponent's skill or is skeptical of the size of the purse, Thompson had forced Lawless to come into the ring one pound over the welterweight limit. This technicality preserved Thompson's championship.

Repeats Winning Performance.

Bucky had whipped Young Jack several weeks ago when Thompson still was seeking a chance to battle Freeman for the welter title. Many thought that had been strategy to lure Freeman into the ring. But last night Lawless repeated his victory, much in the fashion of the first.

The Stadium's reduced prices, with 11 ringside seats, brought an official paid attendance of 11,246. The gross receipts were $21,809.90.

Perhaps Thompson loafed in the early rounds. He also may have been a shade off his best condition. But there was no denying that Bucky flicked his left hand in Thompson's face repeatedly, checking the Negro's body attack, never permitting him to get set. In so doing he piled up the winning points.

A Close Decision.

The decision, however, was very close, partly because Thompson rallied to take the final round by a wide margin. Referee Joe McNamara called the bout a draw, scoring 50 points for each. The judges, Rube Metz and Livingston Orseborne, scored the fight $1-48 and $1-48, respectively, for Lawless.

Lawless commenced the battle with a rush which carried him into the middle rounds with a lead. His stinging left and an occasional right to the head which twice bounced Thompson back into the ropes were his weapons.

By the sixth round, which, with the exception of the last, was the best of the ten, Thompson had hit a more determined pace. Still, he did not fight with his usual effectiveness. A left hook to the body seldom failed, but Jack could not locate his opponent when he sent over his right.

Schmeling Stages His Act.

It was a night of exhibitions. Thompson, welterweight champion, had company in Max Schmeling, heavyweight title holder, at least in those states affiliated with the National Boxing association. Max boxed three two minute rounds with sparring partners, whose duties involved reception of a soft thumping with the big training gloves.

Then, too, the national amateur boxing champions of France were on hand. The boys who will meet the Golden Gloves intercity champions at Soldiers' field Tuesday night were introduced from the ring. They were followed by the Chicago team.

King Lavinsky, back from an eastern tour, brought Emmett Rocco, Elwood City, Pa., heavyweight, with him to the Stadium last night, and reversed Rocco's recent victory. The King won beyond doubt. They clinched and struggled with more or less aimless purpose, flailing wildly.

Levinsky Injures Hand.

Levinsky aided after the fight he had injured his right hand in the second round. There was every opportunity for this misfortune, for the King's blows hit Rocco on the head, back and elbows.

Danny Delmont, Chicago lightweight, and Davey Abad of Panama battled royally in one of the eight round preliminaries. Abad was nearly out in the second round and again in the sixth, but he rallied to finish spectacularly. Delmont received the decision.

In the other eight rounder, Harry Dublinsky, Chicago, outpointed Tommy Grogan of Omaha, Neb. Grogan, although the more rugged, could not cope with Dublinsky's speed and dazzling left jabs.

12,000 BOO AS BERG DEFEATS TONY HERRERA

New York, May 8.—(AP)—Jackie Kid Berg, British lightweight, came back tonight to whip Tony Herrera, slim Mexican puncher from El Paso, Tex., in the main 10 round bout in Madison Square Garden. Twelve thousand saw the first fistic show at the big battle pit in six weeks and booed the decision lustily.

Berg gained the unanimous decision of the referee and two judges. Herrera, a clean limbed, two fisted poacher, caught the eyes of the crowd, however, and though he won only two rounds on some of the critics' scrawly cards, he was wildly cheered as he left the ring.

RAIN POSTPONES SOX WELCOME TO YANKS, M'CARTHY

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

If the weather man is agreeable the White Sox and some other people intend to put on a welcome for Joe McCarthy this afternoon when he makes his first Chicago appearance in a Yankee uniform. The program of events, part of which the Sox hope will be a spanking for the New Yorkers, will be the same as would have taken place yesterday if rainfall hadn't temporarily ruined Comiskey park for the purpose for which it was built. There'll be band music, floral presentations, possibly a few of the inevitable traveling bags and undoubtedly a few base hits.

Just who will be picked to handle the pitching for him in his homecoming was something McCarthy was doubtful about last evening. The supposition has been that the ex-Cub chief didn't have enough pitchers to permit him any leeway in selections, but he's dug them up from some place. He might work young Vern Gomez today. Or he might decide George Pipgras is a suitable candidate. Then again Roy Sherid is a possibility. Hal McKain still is Manager Bush's choice.

Same Old Joe.

Transferring his business affairs to New York has worked no change in McCarthy—at least not thus far. He still provides short, crisp answers to all questions. He still thinks the Cubs have a pretty good ball team; also the Cardinals. In fact he thinks the entire National league is O. K. He thinks the same of the American league—what he has seen of it. Having seen the Athletics and Senators he hasn't much more to look at, unless the Indians should surprise him. Secretly, he believes he'll surprise a few folks with his own team. Give him some fair pitching and he'll not only surprise 'em; he'll shock 'em.

Here's how McCarthy expressed himself yesterday on matters of greatest interest:

"The Athletics still have those two great pitchers going, so will be tough. . . . Washington looks good. . . . Our pitching is going to be better than I figured. . . . The big fellow [Ruth] is great. They'll never stop him as a hitter. I put him on first to protect his weak leg and then decided some clumsy runner might bump into him so moved him back to the outfield. He'll have to be careful for another week or so."

Welcomes Day of Rest.

Because of the crippled condition of his talent Donie Bush voiced no objection over the weather yesterday. For one thing, a day off might get the boys completely away from the habit of running the wrong way on pop flies. The rain also provided another 24 hours of rest for Willie Kamm's strained ankle. There is a chance that he'll be able to function today. If he returns it will give Bush a chance to put Kerr at short where both Appling and Jeffries have been having more than their share of troubles. Kerr also hit a bit while acting at third.

Greentree Trio Favored; Equipoise 2d Choice.

Preakness Field

BALTIMORE, Md., May 8.—[Special.]—The post positions, jockeys, weights, and probable odds of the field of nine colts entered in the fortieth running of the $50,000 added Preakness here tomorrow follow:

| PP. | Horse. | Jockey. | Wt. | Prob. odds. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 1— | *Twenty Grand | C. Kurtsinger | 126 | 7-5 |
| 2— | Equipoise | R. Workman | 126 | 5-2 |
| 3— | *Surf Board | L. McAtee | 126 | 7-5 |
| 4— | Sol Gills | F. Coltiletti | 126 | 20-1 |
| 5— | Mate | G. Ellis | 126 | 8-1 |
| 6— | Aegis | D. Meriger | 126 | 30-1 |
| 7— | Clock Tower | P. Walls | 126 | 20-1 |
| 8— | *Anchors Aweigh | No boy | 126 | 7-5 |
| 9— | Ladder | L. Schaefer | 126 | 20-1 |

Baltimore, Md., May 8.—[Special.]—Nine colts have been named for the fortieth Preakness, to be run as the fifth race at Pimlico track here tomorrow. This is perhaps the most competitive field in the history of the $50,000 added classic at a mile and three-sixteenths. All will carry weight for age, 126 pounds.

If all start the winner will get $50,225. If there are more, $1,000 additional for each goes to the winner. There were eleven starters last year.

Take Final Workouts.

All the horses are fit and trained to the minute through weeks of careful handling. If tomorrow is fair the public that makes the final odds probably will veer to Twenty Grand and Surf Board. Anchors Aweigh will not tip the betting scale either way to a great extent. Mate is certain to be well supported and a close third choice. The sharpshooters will scatter on Sol Gills, Ladder, and Aegis.

Equipoise, Mate, Twenty Grand, Sol Gills, Surf Board, and Anchors Aweigh were out for short breezes early today.

The historic weathervane on the clubhouse—a bronze horse and arrow on a ball bearing pivot—had shifted this morning and now indicates the track will be almost fast tomorrow, local prophets are saying.

Expect Largest Crowd.

The fact that the Preakness will be held this year on Saturday, instead of Friday, and the keen competition that exists in the field, which includes the cream of the three year olds with the exception of Jamestown, will attract the largest crowd to Pimlico tomorrow in the history of Maryland racing.

There is quite an issue over the relative merits of Twenty Grand and Equipoise, with Mate having plenty of backers. Unlike a year ago, when the race was virtually conceded to Gallant Fox, every inch of ground will be fought for tomorrow, and the result may depend on the last stride and the officials in the stands.

Mate's Form Concealed.

Mate's form has been carefully concealed. His work yesterday revealed him as at his best, and he reveled in the mud. The weak point, it appears, in Equipoise is that he has been sick. He has recovered, but at his best it is almost a standoff between the C. V. Whitney colt and the Greentree star.

KEEPING AN EYE ON THOSE FRENCH BATTLERS

ROOT TO PITCH FOR CUBS TODAY AGAINST GIANTS

BY EDWARD BURNS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, May 8.—Our Cubs are here ready to engage the Giants in four games of baseball, the first of which is scheduled for tomorrow. And they aren't a bit scared by all the bragging in the New York papers about Mr. McGraw's latest miracle team.

Here they are saying that the Giants are much better than the experts had dreamed they could be, and a couple of million per cent better than they were last year. And last year they had the distinction of being the only National league team that beat the Cubs in the season series, though there were three teams that tied our boys on the year's showing.

The thing that has the McGraw following all steamed up is the showing of the first string pitchers, all of whom worked for McGraw last year.

Tomorrow Hornsby and his boys will look at the pitching of Hubbell, who has had the least early season success of the big four of the Giants' staff. But on succeeding days they will encounter three gents each of whom has won four games. Fitzsimmons and Mitchell haven't lost a game and Walker has lost only one in five starts.

Root will pitch the opener for the Cubs, and Charley boasts the best record of the Cub pitchers, with a record of three games won and one lost.

The Cubs will have their first look at the revised playing field at the Polo grounds. Home plate has been moved 12 feet nearer the center field flagpole, and this has served the purpose of lengthening the foul lines six feet on each side, which, strangely enough, is looked upon as an advantage to visiting players, the Giants having been built on the basis of developing "pull" hitters who could hit just inside the ridiculously short foul lines.

Following the four game series here the Cubs will move over to Brooklyn, where the Robins are showing signs of life after an amazingly poor start.

Will French Out-Gentleman America's Fight Champions?

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.

The first French boxer off the steamship France onto the deck of the New York municipal yacht Macom, which had come down the bay to greet them, was Jacques Delahayes, the welterdelght, who speaks no English at all. He had been told that this boat which lag alongside the France whooping her siren was the reception boat and that the people on board had come down to bid him and the rest of the team welcome in the name of American sportsmanship and all such as that. So, when a man in the uniform of a harbor sailor with gold stripes on his sleeves, who might have been an officer of the United States navy for all that Jacques Delahayes knew, laid his hand on his shoulder, smiled straight at him and said something with apparent cordiality, the boy muttered some grateful reply and smiled back.

A Charming Officer.

The boy had no way of knowing that the officer was saying, "Hello, frog. I hope the American guy knocks you bowlegged in the first round," but Dr. Charles Sebenq, the director of the French team, who was close behind Delahayes, understood just enough English to understand that and spoke just enough to remark to one of his American friends, "the officer has great charm."

Of course this harbor hand was strictly a mugg and he seemed a little bit plastered, too, as he stood near the rail after the landing, but the stripes on his coat and the shield on his cap were misleading and I doubt that the doctor has been entirely reassured yet, nor the fighters, either, who undoubtedly have heard the translation of the greeting since then.

This kind of rivalry is not uncommon between American teams in their annual fights of one kind or another and, remembering the recent row over muckerism in French rugby football, I am not sure that the French as a race are innocent of insulting conduct toward their opponents. But after ten days' close association with the kids of this French boxing team, I can report that I have never seen any of them do an ungentlemanly thing or heard any one say anything discourteous about the United States or the boys whom they expect to fight.

The incident on the Macom would be exaggerated if it were the only gesture of the kind that has been offered the French fighters. But it was only one of a series of remarks which leave the American side of the rivalry quite a score of social or sporting errors. There was one fellow who yanked at the championship medal hanging from a French boxer's lapel by a little tri-color ribbon and asked, "What did that cost?" It has cost about seven dollars. "Well, for God's sake," said he, contemptuously, letting it fall. Just a born sportsman.

Boys Stick Together.

On the France these French boys generally flocked together for moral support, walking the decks or tossing the little hemp hoops over the net in the deck tennis tournament, with their berets yanked over one ear and their pants yanked high by their suspenders. But when they had to meet people they always bobbed up from their chairs and whisked off their berets, and none of them ever boasted of his fights or smashed up any furniture as some young American sportsmen have been known to do, when traveling.

Not to be too evasive, I have heard of a plan for one of the American boxers to point to his French opponent's shoe at the opening bell and then belt him one on the jaw as he looked down. The idea isn't even original. It was invented by one of the foulest fighters that ever entered the ring, Kid McCoy, a quarter of a century ago.

Perhaps the fact that an American boy can make from $5 to $8 a day as compared with the Frenchman's 35 or 40 francs has something to do with the disrespect, which is not general, understand, but just sufficiently apparent to need pointing out. But wages are a matter of geography. In Paris some pretty good American newspapermen are working long hours

SIGHTSEEING AND BOXING TAKE UP DAY FOR FRENCH

BY HEROL EGAN.

"I'd bet on that boy to beat any amateur of his weight in the country."

A small group of spectators, including photographers, reporters, and residents of the Medinah Athletic club, yesterday were watching the first real workout in Chicago of the French boxing team. The remark was made about "Tombstone" Esnault by one of the greatest critics of boxing in the United States.

Esnault, who is a lightweight, had just finished a sparkling bout, which looked more like a real fight than a training workout, with Zigan, middleweight.

"He has a right which reminds me of another Frenchman, and a great one, Georges Carpentier," said the observer. "The punch starts the same way and shoots out with the same unexpectedness. In addition, that kid has speed, aggressiveness, and lots of ring sense. Unless I am very much mistaken, some Chicago lad is going to lose some of his hide and most of his illusions."

Laudrin Impresses Spectators.

Another of the French team to make a big impression was Fernand Laudrin, the heavyweight aviator, who will try to bring down Yustin Sirutis, the Goliath from New York, next Tuesday night.

Fernand passed the afternoon exchanging punches with his roommate, Elyas, the French captain. Laudrin was a light heavyweight last year and has twice fought and defeated Elyas in French championship matches. The latter has lost only four matches in his entire career, two of which were at the very beginning.

"He is too good, too happy," the little coach said. "He laughs all the time."

Only once since the team left the Gare St. Lazare, at Paris, for the trip

LAUDRIN, ZIGAN AND ESNAULT SET FAST PACE

Dardell of N. Y. Six Pounds Overweight.

This is the natural question of Chicago fans who will watch the international bouts with the intercity Golden Gloves champions Tuesday night at Soldiers' field. It was answered by the first workout of these French boys yesterday afternoon at the Medinah Athletic club. And it can be backed up by the records of French amateur fighters in the 1928 Olympic boxing tournaments.

Esnault, the French lightweight champion, yesterday demonstrated he is one of the best 135 pound scrappers ever to visit Chicago. Highly lauded by Herol Egan, sports editor of the Paris edition of THE TRIBUNE, Esnault supported that opinion. He is fast on his feet and those who saw him in action are of the opinion Scotty Sylvano, Golden Gloves intercity champion, will have a busy evening if he is to win an international crown.

Laudrin Shows Speed.

Capt. Freddie Caserio of the American team also is matched against one of the best of the invaders, Jean Zigan, middleweight. And Fernand Laudrin, 168 pounds of bone and muscle, will give Yustin Sirutis all he can handle, so the experts said yesterday.

Laudrin is in excellent condition and for a big man is very fast. Sirutis, who is a junior in New York university, has suffered from a cold until recently, and at present he is not in the best of condition.

The other members of the invading squad are good boxers, although their first workouts did not impress as did those of Esnault, Zigan, and Laudrin.

International Record Good.

The 1928 Olympic boxing results also furnish a basis of comparison of boxing strength in the United States and France. Johnny Behr, one of the coaches of the Golden Gloves team, who was an Olympic track coach in 1928 and saw the boxing tournament, yesterday offered his opinion of the relative merits of boxing in the two countries.

"America took one of its best teams to the 1928 Olympics," Behr said. "Several of the boys were touted as certain to win championships. We didn't win. Neither did France, but a study of the results of the bouts shows that France's record was equal to that of the United States. And that certainly should give an idea of boxing in France."

Armand Apell, French flyweight, was defeated in the final bout for the championship by Anton Kocsis of Hungary. Hyman Miller of the United States lost in the first round of the divisional fights.

How They Compared.

Ernest Mignard, the French 118 pound boxer, won his first match and then lost. Georges Boireau of France went to the quarter finals in featherweight division. George Devine of the United States was defeated in the semi-finals.

Georges Carcagne, the French lightweight, won one bout before being eliminated, while the entries in the heavier divisions had records which compared favorably. In these same weights, 147 to unlimited, the United States had no boxer who won his first round bout.

Chicago boxers yesterday continued their drills. With the exception of Phil Dardell, the New York welterweight, who is six pounds overweight, all are ready now. Dardell is in excellent condition and fought last week in New York. The card of introductory bouts is completed and the program went to press last night.

Twenty-three thousand eight page souvenir programs will be printed for those holding reserved seats. Additional thousands of programs, each with the names of all contestants, will be distributed to the general admission customers.

Elevators, Skyscrapers Give Them a Thrill.

to Chicago, has Laudrin been seen to lose his good natured smile. That was the fault of Delahayes, the blond barber. Delahayes decided to combine business with sport, while still retaining his amateur standing, so he brought along the tools of his trade.

Offers Bargain Prices.

"Why pay twenty-five cents for a shave by the ship's barber, mes amis?" he asked. "That is six francs. I will give give you a first class shave for two francs or a haircut for five francs. And I will be satisfied with a modest tip."

This sounded reasonable and just to Laudrin. He decided to invest in a shave. So Jacques went to work. He was making some progress when the ship hit a wave and gave a lurch, with the result that Laudrin was clipped on the ear.

"Accidents don't happen to good barbers. I am willing to fight amateurs, but I want to be shaved by professionals."

Laudrin is a soldier on the active list. He is a mechanic attached to the 34th aviation regiment at Le Bourget, the great military airport of Paris. He greatly enjoys flying and is now in training as a machine gunner. But when his military service is finished he plans to become a professional boxer.

Likes to Watch Lights.

"But only after the Olympic games next year," he said. "I want to do all I can to help win for France."

The things in Chicago which have impressed Laudrin most are the skyscrapers, the swinging searchlights at night, and the express elevators.

"Out at Le Bourget we have a great searchlight which is used whenever there is a plane in the air after sunset," he said. "There is another at Mount Valerien—remember how it flooded the skies when Col. Lindbergh flew across from New York to visit us? But there are no Lindberghs in the air now, so why do these lights play all the time?"

He was told it was to amuse the small boys and to give an unemployed man a job. Later he was told it was aviation's most powerful beacon light.

The speed with which the elevators go is a perpetual source of astonishment to the French boys, for there is nothing to approach it anywhere in Europe.

The boys were told that they would be taken to see their first baseball game this afternoon. They all have heard of Babe Ruth, whom they call "le gros bebe," and all are anxious to see him. They will also go through the Swift & Co. plant at the stockyards, after which they will be entertained at luncheon.

French Quiet Now, but——

And, although the American team has every advantage in these fights, there is a quiet, mysterious air about the French fighters which leads me to believe that any American fighter who takes the ring expecting to knock a frog bowlegged with one belt with lose his fight. Amateur boxers aren't the most consistent athletes in the world and these French fighters who rushed to the rail to see the statue of Liberty and gasped at the fabulous spires of New York and Chicago realise that they are underdog in this meet. Arrogance is the manner of the front-runner but the come-behinder hasn't much to say, and the Frenchmen haven't said a word.

Win or lose, the French kids will be decent about it. No team ever went abroad with better manners, and it would be unfortunate if they should out-gentleman the Americans on the Americans' own home grounds in international sport which, as everybody knows, is supposed to promote the idea of hands across the sea and as often as not results in nothing more pleasant than dirty digs and the calling of names. The French were tolerably rotten to the American Rugby team at the Olympic games in Paris and if they should out-gentleman the American fighters now, a fine beefing point would be lost.

COLUMBIA SIGNS MARTY BRILL AS ASSISTANT COACH

New York, May 8.—(AP)—Columbia university today announced the signing of Martin Brill, Notre Dame halfback during 1929 and 1930, as an assistant football coach. Brill will assist Herb Kopf in training the backs.

Lou Little, head football coach, in discussing the appointment, said it did not mean that Columbia was going to "adopt Rockne football or make any radical changes in its style of play."

HONOR MEMORY OF TRIMBLE AT AURORA TODAY

Sprinters to Clash in Memorial Handicap.

BY FRENCH LANE.

Racegoers at Aurora today will pay a silent tribute to Clifford R. Trimble, founder of the track and one of the leaders in restoring legalized racing to Illinois.

The Clifford R. Trimble Memorial handicap will feature the program. It is a dash at six furlongs and the best sprinters at the track will engage in the contest. Burning Up, winner of the Cuban derby, and triumphant in his first start at Aurora, probably will be the favorite. Fortmanteau, Bud Broom, Little Gyp, and others will furnish the opposition.

Taps will be sounded as the horses parade to the post and there will be other ceremonies which will bring back memories of the downstate racing enthusiast, who helped to make possible the fine racing now offered in Chicago, and who died late last summer.

Favorites Fare Poorly.

While t steady rain beat down and soaked some 10,000 at the Aurora course yesterday the favorites were behaving badly. They didn't run the way the d

Wes Ferrell, the ace pitcher for the Indians, voluntarily left the box in the first inning with a sore arm. He had permitted Boston to hit three doubles.

TIGERS TOP SENATORS, 3-2.

Detroit, Mich., May 8.—(AP)—Earl Whitehill and Lloyd Brown, backed by good fielding, fought it out on the mound for ten innings today as Detroit defeated Washington, 3 to 2, in the first of a four game series.

Two triples and a walk in the first inning gave the Senators their two runs. Detroit used singles by Johnson and Alexander, Owen's walk, a wild pitch, and a fielder's choice to tie the score in the same inning. A double in the tenth by Bill Akers, after Owen had singled and been sacrificed to second by Koenig, gave Detroit its winning margin. Score:

Robins Defeat Phillies, 4-3; Shaute Pitches

Philadelphia, Pa., May 8.—(AP)—Joe Shaute, Brooklyn southpaw, pitched his way to his third straight victory over the Phillies today, 4 to 3. He weakened in the ninth inning and Jack Quinn was called upon to stop a threatened Philadelphia rally at the cost of one run.

Stewart Bolen, who started for the Phillies for the first time, lost his own game through wildness. He filled the bases with a single and two walks in the fourth inning and Johnny Frederick doubled to drive in three runs. Babe Herman's single with O'Doul on second in the sixth inning brought in the winning tally. Buss Arlett drove in two Philly runs.

BRONOWICZ AND ZAHARIAS HEAD THURSDAY CARD

Promoter Doc Krone has arranged five bouts on his wrestling card for next Thursday night at the Rainbo Stadium, Clark street and Lawrence avenue. George Zaharias, Greek-American, will meet Frank Bronowicz in the main event. Zaharias exemplifies the rushing type, while Bronowicz, 250 pound Pole, will rely on speed.

Jim McMillen, Greysiake, Ill., meets Pat O'Shocker of Utah in the semi-windup. The Utah grappler knows how to play rough and also is clever.

A pair of veterans meet when Hans Steinke, German giant, and Wallace Dagnid, Canada, clash. Jim Steele, Californian, will spot Jim Clinkstock, Indian, at least 25 pounds. The other match is between Jack Smith, Chicago, and Hans Bauer, Germany. They wrestled to a draw here recently.

Ed (Strangler) Lewis will arrive in the loop today in time to go through a workout at the Mullen gymnasium in preparation for his best two out of three falls with Frank Judson, Harvard wrestling coach, at the Coliseum on Wednesday night.

Keller Runs in Quadrangular Meet Today

Jack Keller, Ohio State's sophomore hurdler, who bettered the world's record in the 120 yard event last Saturday, and a field of the best middle distance runners in the country are expected to be the outstanding performers in the annual quadrangular meet of Chicago, Northwestern, Ohio State, and Wisconsin this afternoon at Stagg field. The meet will start at 2 p. m. with the preliminaries in the 100 yard dash.

Keller ran a sensational race in the high hurdles at the Ohio relays to defeat Lee Sentman of Illinois, conference champion, by a stride in the record time of :14.3. He has run the 220 yard low hurdles in :23.4 and is expected to win both events today. The injury which put Allan East, Chicago sprinter, out of the dash events will give Keller a chance to accumulate points in the 100 and 220 also.

Wisconsin, because of its strength in the field events, is the favorite, but Ohio State is close enough to the Badgers that the result may hinge on Keller's performances in the dashes. Keller will be making his first appearance on Stagg field since he set records in both hurdles events at the University of Chicago interscholastic two years ago.

With Letts of Chicago, Bloor of Ohio, MacAuliffe of Northwestern, and Henke of Wisconsin entered in the quarter-mile, the race is expected to produce a flat :48 time.

Letts covered the distance in 0:48.3 to set a new Iowa record last Saturday and the other three have bettered 0:49. In the half mile Letts will fight it out with Beetham and Bloor of Ohio State, both of whom ran on the two mile relay race for the United States in the British Empire games. Letts may also pick up points in the broad jump, in which he can do 22 feet 3 inches.

Tom Warne of Northwestern, in the pole vault, and Sam Behr, Wisconsin, in the weight events, may be able to provide new meet records. Wisconsin has two good jumpers in Shaw and Corp but may lose first place if Ralston Russell, Ohio jumper, gets up to the 6 feet 3 he achieved last Saturday.

TOLLEY SAILS FOR BRITISH AMATEUR; TO USE NEW BALL

New York, May 8.—[Special.]—Cyril Tolley, former British amateur champion and one of the longest hitters in golf, sailed tonight to compete in the British amateur title play at Westward Ho.

Before leaving on the Majestic for another bid at the title which he lost to Bobby Jones last year, Tolley said he would use the larger and lighter ball that the U. S. G. A. has adopted. With all the discussion that has evolved about the new sphere, especially concerning its merits in the wind, Tolley's decision would be of interest, at least in the way of experiment.

The participants of Britain are using the old ball, which by regulation "shall not be greater than 1.62 ounces avoirdupois" and in size "not less than 1.62 inches in diameter." The new ball not adopted in Britain is 1.55 ounces avoirdupois and 1.68 inches in diameter falls within the specified requirements and consequently is legal for play abroad.

White Wins Six Round Decision Over Alton

In the WAKE of the NEWS

EARLIER CHICAGO.

DEAR Wake: When railroads were in their swaddling clothes, along the '40's and '50's, the theory was that cars must not leave their own line. To prevent this, each road built its tracks of a different gauge. This necessitated the transfer of all passengers and freight at each junction point or terminal.

This system naturally resulted in delay and breakage. Merchants ordering goods from New York frequently waited 30 days before receiving complete shipments. One or two boxes would arrive with "Freight and charges to follow," and each consignment bore a charge for "cooperage" owing to the frequent breakage. There are papers on record where a clerk added $2 cooperage charges on a live bull that was led a distance of four miles from one depot to another.

To obviate these transfers and delays, some genius built a car called a "compromise gauge," in use as late as 1871, on which the trucks could be adjusted to fit tracks of various roads. This, however, caused delay and expense in adjustment and the cars became unpopular.

Then came demand for a standard gauge. This met violent opposition from draymen and transfer men at junction points as it would put them out of business, and also spoil the passenger market for pies, popcorn, and peanuts, so the strife was called the "peanut war."

The roads met the situation by sending an army of workmen and changing the rails at junction points to standard gauge on a Sunday.

It was back in these times that the story originated of the shipment from Texas which in addition to household goods contained a burro, and the clerk checking the statement notated, "One bureau short, one jackass over." This tally sheet hung in the office of the general freight agent for years.

Question.

How many days since we said good-by,
How many wishes that I could atone,
How many hours of futile regret,
How many dreads of being alone!
Is it all childish—at least can I yearn
For Yesterday's hours—at most, your return?

For the last two Sundays The Wake has been on the air rather through force of circumstances than any natural fitness for broadcasting. We have refrained from listeners' comment because we did not care to publish the knocks which would be only fair along with any boosts. Since the caustic comment of a professor in an adjacent school of journalism on "Newspaper English" was reported to us, however, we cannot resist this word from a feminine journalism student in a state university:

"Here's another radio fan for you. . . . Strictly speaking, your fifteen minute talk taught me more than two weeks of classroom lecturing would do. Isn't that another good reason why the program should continue? Please discuss 'ladies' in the news paper field."

Court to Rule Next Week on Carnera Case

New York, May 8.—(AP)—Some time next week Primo Carnera, giant Italian, and Jack Sharkey, Boston's constant contender, will find out whether their preliminary gestures toward a fight at Ebbets field, Brooklyn, June 10, were just a waste of time.

Federal Judge John Knox, who learned of the fight game through weeks of trial of Jack Kearns' damage suit against Jack Dempsey, listened to the pleas of attorneys for the Madison Square Garden Corporation of Illinois today, heard Carnera's legal reply, and took under advisement the Garden request for an injunction. He requested that briefs be filed not later than Monday.

Attorney George W. Whiteside, representing William Saxe, himself an attorney for New York Madison Square Garden as well as president of the Illinois subsidiary bringing the suit, argued that Carnera signed a contract with the Illinois Garden on Jan. 13, 1931, calling for a match with the winner of the Max Schmeling-Young Stribling bout, to be held in Cleveland July 3, and at the same time gave the Garden exclusive right to his services until September. The injunction was asked to restrain Carnera from breaking that contract by fighting Sharkey here for Jimmy Johnston, a rival promoter.

Trilliums and Peepers Prove Spring Is Here

BY BOB BECKER.

The house wrens have arrived and now are filling the air with their bubbling music. Waxy white blossoms of the trillium may be seen in the woods. Mandrake plants have boosted their big umbrella tops until they are a conspicuous sight in our woodlands and the spring peepers are contributing a shrill chorus to the lowlands. Add to these signs the fact that the brown thrasher, the "mockingbird" of Chicagoland, is conducting his wonderful concerts morning and evening, and we have an abundance of evidence that spring is in the woods these days.

We saw the first trilliums of 1931 just a few days ago. These chaste, dignified white flowers are one of the prize attractions of spring in the woods. There is so much beauty in this flower that nature found it unnecessary to give it fragrance.

Called Trinity Flower.

The next time you see a white trillium note how nature arranged the parts of this spring beauty in threes. Three leaves, three petals, three sepals, etc. This arrangement has been an impressive one to Christians, years ago who named it the Trinity flower. It is unfortunate but true that these lovely white flowers are not nearly as plentiful as they were years ago largely due to the fact that ruthless flower lovers [?] have yanked them from the soil not knowing that when a trillium is picked with its leaves it dies.

When we were fishing the Brule a few days ago in northern Wisconsin one of the noisiest evidences of spring that we heard along the trout stream was the shrill chorus of the spring peepers. Here is a little fellow who does his bit to pep up the landscape before the trees have brought out their leaves.

Peeper Pipes for Anglers.

The peeper is that little amphibian, a relative of the common frog, who pipes for you when you are trout fishing on May 1. Nearly every trout fisherman hears him around that time because his shrill, high and continuous peeping fills the lowlands with music. And this little frog [he's only about an inch long, mind you] makes you hear him. He's good for a half mile with those high pitched notes.

This little music maker carries his own broadcasting station. If you can find him in the marsh you'll see it in the shape of a large sac, a vocal sac, which makes him look like a swollen pouter pigeon. Early in the spring they cling to grass or ride high, wide, and handsome on the stem of a water plant.

C. D. G. A. HOLDS FIRST TOURNEY ON WEDNESDAY

Leading Golfers to Play at Sunset Ridge.

Johnny Lehman, Jack Westland, Chick Evans, and John McKinlay Jr. have sent in their entries for the Chicago District Golf association's first tournament of the season. That in itself seems to assure a representative field for the event, which is to be held at the Sunset Ridge Country club Wednesday.

This tournament will be the first test of the new handicap list prepared by the association, more than 7,300 Chicago district players having been rated. All with a handicap of 20 or less, who are members of clubs affiliated with the organization, are eligible to compete in this event. No green fees are required.

Entries will be accepted at the tee, but contestants have been requested to send their names to Joe Davis, secretary of the association, at 236 North Clark street.

This will be the first event under the new tournament committee of Harry Radix, Ridgemoor; Harold Burnham, Calumet; A. W. Hale, Medinah, and S. Lewis Reinhardt Jr., Northmoor.

The Western Advertising Golfers' association, having warmed up with a tournament at French Lick, announce another event to be held at the Midlothian Country club May 19.

LEFTY GROVE'S ABSENCE IS DUE TO HEAVY COLD

St. Louis, Mo., May 8.—(AP)—Lefty Grove, speedball artist of Connie Mack's Athletics, idle since April 24, is ready to resume firing. Manager Mack explained today that Grove's inactivity for 11 days has been due to a severe cold.

"He hasn't felt like pitching," Mack said, "and for that reason I have permitted him to treat his cold his own way. He is all right now and he probably will work in one of the games against the Browns."

Grove's absence from the Athletics' firing line has resulted in many inquiries. He has made only three appearances on the mound since the season opened on April 14.

SEES OPERATION AS ONLY CURE FOR DRUNKARDS

Doctor Says All Other Treatments Fail.

New York, May 8.—[Special.]—The cause of acute alcoholism, baffling to physicians for years, is nothing more complex than an overabundance of intracranial fluid, and the cure is a comparatively simple operation, according to Dr. Edward Spencer Cowles, director of the Park Avenue hospital. Dr. Cowles' theory is set forth today in the current issue of the New York Medical Journal and Record.

If Dr. Cowles is correct, that portion of the population that is plagued by an uncontrollable appetite for liquor is in a reverse situation from those persons who are plagued by hay fever. The hay fever victims need an injection and the alcoholics need an operation to reduce the excess of fluid created by an irritation in the covering of the brain.

Pressure Is Blamed.

The excess intracranial fluid, Dr. Cowles asserts, creates a pressure that explains the emotional instability that causes many men to be faithless to their wives and otherwise perform antisocial acts after becoming the victims of alcoholism. Hitherto such actions have been considered a personality disorder.

As reported, Dr. Cowles' discovery makes clear for the first time the disease entity in the brain cells, and the cure is effected by very simple methods of promoting the healing of the irritation that produces the fluid. This discovery, Dr. Cowles says, already has saved young men whose lives had become a menace to society and has restored them to a life of stability and responsibility.

Dr. Cowles makes clear in his article that no amount of medication, diet, exercise, institutional care, religious persuasion, or will power can do more than temporarily reform the confirmed drunkard. It is the pressure in the brain that disturbs the emotions and causes the craving for alcohol, he states, and when it is removed the desire for drink goes with it.

Cells' Reaction Selective.

Drinking, Dr. Cowles explains, is a social custom, and not every one who drinks develops an uncontrollable desire for alcohol. This is due to the fact that the brain cells of certain people have a selective reaction to alcohol, just as certain people have a selective reaction to hay fever.

There are as relatively few people likely to become chronic alcoholics as there are people likely to develop hay fever susceptibility. For the great majority of persons drinking in moderation is a comparatively safe relaxation, Dr. Cowles believes. For the few alcoholically susceptible, however, drink must be renounced permanently, otherwise the cure will have to be repeated.

YESTERDAY'S PUZZLE SOLVED

LITTLE ORPHAN ANNIE: Discussing the Departed

2 MORE JURORS ARE NEEDED FOR KIRKLAND TRIAL

Panel from Streets to Be Questioned.

BY WILLARD EDWARDS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Valparaiso, Ind., May 8.—[Special.]—Two jurors remained to be chosen tonight in the Virgil Kirkland murder trial. Ten days have been consumed in finding ten men not prejudiced against the young defendant, charged with the rape and murder of Arlene Draves, his 13 year old girl friend.

Convinced at last that the ordinary procedure of selecting jurors could not apply in this case, Judge Grant Crumpacker ordered the sheriff to go into the streets and notify citizens of good repute who were willing to serve to appear in court and submit to examination. The court had previously issued such an order and then recalled it because of a protest by the state.

Sheriff Gets Instructions.

"Pick men and women who are qualified citizens of this county," the judge told the sheriff. "They should be under 60 years old and with good reputations. Try to find those who would not be hampered in their daily occupations by jury service."

The judge then adjourned court until Monday.

Kirkland's natural pallor has deepened to a pasty white during the strain of the ten days of jury picking. His deep set eyes have become furtive. He appeared relieved at the prospect of the actual taking of evidence next week.

The afternoon session today was enlivened by a dispute over the qualifications of Clayton Phillips, a farmer, who said he was prejudiced against drinkers. The defense challenged him for cause on the ground that young Kirkland, who was drinking liquor the night that Arlene Draves was slain, could not be given a fair trial by such a juror.

State Wants Him Seated.

"I think the juror is qualified," protested Prosecutor John Underwood. "He thinks a sober man is to be given more credence than a drinking man, that's all."

"I'm inclined to agree with the state," declared the judge. "After all, I don't think we have yet come to the stage in this country where sobriety does not count for something."

"There is some difference," the judge responded dryly, "between coffee drinking and liquor drinking."

U.S. COURT DISMISSES NEW PETITION AIMED AT ZION OVERSEER

Opponents of Wilbur Glenn Voliva, overseer of Zion, were unable to establish his alleged insolvency yesterday and Federal Judge Charles E. Woodward denied a motion of counsel for five petitioning creditors to file an amended petition in bankruptcy.

WILBUR GLENN VOLIVA.

Judge Woodward last week had dismissed the original petition on the ground that it failed to show acts of bankruptcy or insolvency, and the amended petition was refused for the same reason.

Attorneys for Voliva presented $700 and an affidavit in court. The affidavit stated that Voliva is the head man of a flourishing city of 6,000, with more than a score of prosperous industries. These include one of the largest bakeries in the world, a $1,000,000 department store, a bank, real estate development projects, and a large candy factory, according to the affidavit.

DRIVER INJURED AS AUTO PLUNGES INTO CEMETERY

Ralph H. Homrig, 24 years old, a salesman living in Waukegan, was probably fatally injured yesterday when he lost control of his automobile and it went off the pavement of Green Bay road about 3 miles northwest of Waukegan. Robert Gordon Jr., son of the Rev. Robert Gordon of Wilmette, who was riding with Homrig, was uninjured after the car had plunged across a shallow ditch, through a fence, and into Mount Rest cemetery, where it upset after knocking down three tombstones.

Gordon told police that he was hitchhiking from his home to visit relatives in Fond du Lac., Wis., and had hailed Homrig, asking him for a rade. He said that Homrig did not seem to be well and he asked if he could take the wheel. As Homrig said "No," the car left the road, Gordon said. Homrig was taken to a Waukegan hospital.

J. W. STEPHENSON, INDIANA BANKER, DIES SUDDENLY

Mr. Stephenson had been in California on business and was returning home when stricken. Yesterday he thought himself sufficiently recovered to continue on his trip, and was to have been accompanied by his family physician. Mr. Stephenson was president of the Marion Association of Commerce, president of the Delta Electric company of Marion, head of the Indiana Trunk company, and a director of the Peerless Motor company.

U. S. BUILDINGS AT COST OF 227 MILLIONS RUSHED

Washington, D. C., May 8.—[Special.]—President Hoover estimated today that 395 different building projects, totaling 227 millions, of the federal public construction program will have been completed or put under way within six months.

Buildings costing 119 millions have been started or finished in the last eighteen months, he said. Sites had been obtained and plans and specifications made for projects totaling $58,000,000, contracts on which are to be let within ninety days. During the subsequent ninety days, he said, another $60,000,000 will be let, and in the last ninety days of the six months $40,000,000 more work will be put under way.

TRAIL OF BLOOD LEADS POLICE TO FAINTING THIEF

Tossing a brick through the show window of the Jacob Klein jewelry store at 508 South Halsted street last night, Woodrow Dawson, 18 years old, snatched one tray of rings from the display and was seizing a second tray when he slashed his right wrist on the jagged glass.

Dropping the second tray, Dawson fled with the first. The jeweler, having heard the window crash, summoned Des Plaines street police, who followed a trail of blood into a nearby alley.

There they found Dawson in a faint from loss of blood. At the bridewell hospital physicians said amputation of his arm might possibly save his life. Dawson, a native of Greensboro, N. C., had been living at the Starr hotel, 617 West Madison street.

TROOPS ON GUARD AS MINE BATTLE VICTIM IS BURIED

Everts, Ky., May 8.— (AP) —Carl Richmond, miner, who was killed Tuesday in a clash with deputy sheriffs, was buried here today under escort of National Guardsmen, sent here to preserve order in the coal fields. Two deputies and a commissary clerk were the other victims of Tuesday's fight on a roadside near Evarts.

Military police were on duty throughout the city today. There were no disorders and all remained quiet.

Around a conference table Col. Dan M. Carrell, commanding the 325 soldiers, listened to all sides in the labor controversy that has brought death and disorder to this little mining community for months. He will write a report to Gov. Flem D. Sampson. Testimony was not made public.

At Harlan a special grand jury resumed its investigation into mine disorders but no report was made late today.

Richmond fell in the midst of a battle with discontented miners on one side and "the law"—sheriff's deputies and mine guards—on the other in which five were slain. It was the climax to disturbances which led to the sending in of troops. The military guard was provided for the funeral when miners said they feared they would be attacked.

WILLIAM TEMPEL DIES; HAD LINCOLN FOR A CUSTOMER

William Tempel, founder of a real estate, bond and mortgage business which bore his name, but which has since been taken over by another firm following his retirement, died yesterday in the home of a daughter, Mrs. William S. Orth, 628 Wrightwood avenue. He was 98 years old, was born in Steinheim, Westphalia, Germany, and had lived in Chicago since he was 21.

WILLIAM TEMPEL. [Koshoe Photo.]

As the proprietor of a grocery store near the site of the present Dearborn street station in the '60's, Mr. Tempel numbered Abraham Lincoln among his customers. At the time of the Chicago fire he had moved his business to Division and Clark streets. This store was destroyed in the fire. Prior to the civil war, he had been engaged in transporting merchandise between Chicago and New Orleans.

Services are to be held Monday morning at the residence of Mrs. Orth, followed by interment at Graceland cemetery. Mr. Tempel is survived by a son, William F. Tempel, and another daughter, Mrs. J. Spielman. There are also seven grandchildren and ten great-grandchildren.

RESTAURANT OWNER IS ROBBED.

Philip Gilman, owner of a restaurant at 4253 South Ashland avenue, was robbed of $200 yesterday when he was held up in a soft drink parlor at 4256 South Ashland avenue by two armed men.

MIDDLE WEST RESERVE BANKS CUT MONEY RATE

Action Pictured as Aid to Trade.

BY O. A. MATHER.

The movement toward easier money rates fostered by the federal reserve authorities spread to the middle west yesterday. The federal reserve banks of Chicago, St. Louis, and Cleveland reduced their rediscount rates from 1 to 3½ per cent. These actions quickly followed that of the New York Reserve bank in cutting its rate from 2 to 1½ per cent on Thursday.

Seven of the twelve federal reserve institutions have reduced their rediscount rates this week. The movement was inaugurated on Wednesday, when the Boston bank cut its rate from 2½ to 2 per cent and the Philadelphia bank lowered its rate from 3 to 2½ per cent. The Dallas bank cut its rate from 3½ to 3 per cent on Thursday. Of the remaining ten reserve institutions, Minneapolis, Kansas City, and Richmond are on a 2½ per cent basis, while Atlanta and San Francisco maintain a 3 per cent rate. However, some of these banks also are expected to follow the downward movement.

Seen as Aid to Business.

The general lowering of federal reserve rediscount rates is regarded as having a double purpose in view—first, to stimulate business and industry by making money available at the cheapest rates in many years; second, to retard the influx of gold into the United States from other countries. The theory behind the second purpose is that the United States now has more gold than it needs for an ample credit base, and that the draining of gold from other countries is hampering our foreign trade. Lower interest rates in this country than prevail abroad would tend to reverse the gold movement by providing greater returns on capital in other countries.

The new rate of the Chicago reserve bank is the lowest in its history. It has been as high as 7 per cent, which was enforced in June, 1920, when speculation in farm lands and commodities was at its height and the post-war stock market boom were still going strong. Following the 1921 depression the rediscount rate was lowered several times, with one reduction ordered by the reserve board despite protests by the bank's directors.

When stock market speculation again ran wild in 1928, the Chicago rediscount rate was advanced to 5 per cent, but following the collapse of the boom in November, 1929, the rate again was lowered by successive reductions of one-half of 1 per cent to the present basis. The reduction in the rate yesterday came simultaneously with a further decline in interest rates on commercial paper, with rates now ranging from 2 to 2½ per cent.

No Sign of Upturn.

What effect the further lowering of interest rates will have in stimulating a trade recovery remains to be seen, of course. At present, business continues in a state of inertia, with no surface signs of a turn in the underlying tide, according to the weekly mercantile reviews.

"Trade and industrial indications show strikingly few changes over the week, with favorable features or the reverse about balancing," Bradstreet's Review says. "On the downside a further weakening of prices of most leading commodities furnishes the least palatable news. While on the favorable side there is found something like a reawakening of buying of oil or gas pipe, a slight gain in retail trade based on a return of warmer weather, signs that most industries are maintaining recent levels of production, and finally, this latter having two sides to it in view of the low levels of farm products, increased assurance of a large winter wheat crop now in the making in the south and central west. The wholesale and jobbing trade shows no particular change from recent earlier weeks."

"The business news of the week was not marked by developments which, in any way, indicated a reversal of the general trends which have recently been apparent," Dun's Review says. "The accumulation of evidence during the period pointed rather to a continuance of the decline in general business activity than to any perceptible slackening in the rate of recession."

CURB MARKET STARTS UPWARD IN LAST HOUR

New York, May 8.—(AP)—The curb market fluttered uncertainly until the last hour of trading today, when it was pulled up suddenly by a wave of short covering.

Utilities were conspicuous in the advance, notably Electric Bond and Share, which gained 2 points in a large turnover. American Gas and Electric and Consolidated Gas of Baltimore also advanced about 2 points and American Superpower, United Light and Power A, and Niagara Hudson gained fractionally. In the natural gas issues Lone Star was a strong spot, rising more than a point.

Oils also rallied, apparently in short covering. Vacuum was an active feature, selling off 2 points, then recovering to close a fraction higher. Gulf, Humble, and Indiana gained about a point and Cities Service a fraction.

Industrials were mixed. Parker Rustproof shot up nearly 7, United States Playing Card gained as much, and Aluminum company 3. Issues up a point or two included Dresser A, Reed-Johnson, Ford, Ltd., Transcontinental Air, Pan-American Airways, and Pilot Radio. Great Lakes Dredge and Wilson-Jones dropped several points to new lows.

North Western Opens New Freight Terminal Monday

BY SCRUTATOR.

On Monday the Chicago and North Western railway will occupy its new $5,000,000 central freight terminal under the Merchandise Mart.

The construction of this terminal marks a new departure for western railroads. Having disposed of the air rights above its tracks to make possible the erection of the world's largest building, the railway company proceeded to utilize the track level area and the basement beneath for its own freight station.

When the company moves to its new terminal Monday its facilities for handling shipments will be more than doubled. A thousand tons of outbound freight can be handled in a day, according to H. R. Terpning, agent.

Affords Earlier Deliveries.

Eighty-six cars can be loaded at one time. The additional capacity will make possible the earlier delivery of freight received in the morning and insure that shipments received up to 5:30 in the evening will be on the way to their destinations that night.

The inbound department is equipped with a cooler where a temperature of 40 degrees is maintained. More than 200 tons of dairy products and meat may be stored there.

The 1,450 foot outfreight platform is 600 feet longer than the present platform, and the infreight platform is 1,250 feet long, an increase of 400 feet. These extend from the north branch of the Chicago river to Wells street.

Beneath each is a storage room and the two are connected by tunnels. Goods received is placed on trailers so that only one handling is necessary, the trailers being moved from truck to warehouse and thence to railway car by tractors. In this way packages are kept off the floor at all times.

Extends Service.

Removal to the new terminal will facilitate the further development of the store door pickup and delivery system instituted by the Chicago and North Western on May 1. Through contracts with trucking concerns the railway company, when requested, now routes package freight direct from the shippers' store or factory to the consignee's address. At present this system is in operation between Chicago and eighty-five other cities and towns on the Chicago and North Western, and it is being extended to other points as rapidly as arrangements can be made.

The Merchandise Mart terminal will be for less than carlot shipments only, replacing the old freight station at Grand avenue. Three trains daily will leave the central terminal for the Proviso yards, where freight will be reloaded into other cars.

The new terminal is bounded by Ferry, Kinzie, and Wells streets and the Chicago river. A ventilating system has been installed to keep the air clear beneath the Merchandise Mart.

EXAMINER URGES DISMISSAL OF LAKE CARGO RATE CASES

Washington, D. C., May 8.—(AP)—Dismissal of the lake cargo coal rate cases was recommended today to the interstate commerce commission by Examiner Bardwell. In a report to the commission, the examiner said he had found southern coal mine operators were not being unduly preferred in freight rates to Lake Erie ports.

Ohio and Pennsylvania operators have complained that rates from eastern Kentucky, Tennessee, West Virginia and southwestern Virginia were too low when compared with rates from the northern fields. The southern fields pay 35 cents a ton more on coal shipped to Lake Erie ports than do the Ohio and Pennsylvania operators and the latter thought this should be increased to at least 45 cents.

Bardwell, advised the commission that in his opinion freight rates have little to do with the Ohio and Pennsylvania mines losing tonnage to the southern operators. He analyzed labor difficulties of the Ohio and Pennsylvania fields and pointed out that great tonnage losses followed labor troubles and union agreements for high wages with which the southern mines did not have to deal. He said after the Ohio and Pennsylvania companies started operation on an open shop basis they again began to pick up business.

"It is unquestionably true that the rate adjustment here assailed is more favorable to the southern operators than would be the case if it were based on a distance scale," he said adding that "under the stress of competition carriers often establish rates and rate relationships which the commission could not require them to establish."

"When such rates," he continued, "appear as a whole to be in the public interest they should not be condemned merely because they do not bear the same relationship to each other as would maximum reasonable rates between the same points."

BUMPER WINTER WHEAT CROP IS FORECAST BY U. S.

A winter wheat crop of 652,000,000 bu is forecast by the United States department of agriculture in its report issued yesterday, compared with 604,000,000 bu harvested last year, 526,000,000 bu estimated in May last year, and 10 year average 547,000,000 000. Average of private reports was 658,000,000 bu. It is the fourth largest crop of winter wheat known, comparing with 674,000,000 bu in 1915, 635,000,000 bu in 1914, and an all time record of 760,000,000 bu in 1919. Abandonment of acreage of 3.7 per cent compared with 10.9 last year and 12.2 per cent as the ten year average, being the smallest abandonment with four exceptions since 1900, the lightest loss being 1.1 per cent in 1919.

10 Million Argentine Gold Cargo En Route New York

New York, May 8.—(AP)—The Bank of the Nation of Buenos Aires today is shipping $10,000,000 in gold from Argentina to New York on the steamer Southern Cross.

RAILROAD INCOME TURNS UP AFTER SHARP DECLINE

BOND MART RESPONDS TO REDISCOUNT CUT; PRICES MOVE HIGHER

New York, May 8.—(AP)—The bond market responded today to the reduction in the rediscount rate with a general advance, which was more marked among some groups than others. Sales aggregated $12,439,000, the largest daily total in about a month and one of the largest this year. Average prices for rails, utilities and industrials showed good gains.

Activity among government obligations was concentrated among a few of them but the advance was general. The treasury 4¼s of 1947-'52 jumped one-half point, which is a large net gain for bonds which fluctuate in thirty-seconds of a point. The Liberty fourth 4¼s closed at a new high level for 1931 and other government bonds ended the day less than one point under their peak prices this year.

Railroad issues also appreciated conspicuously. Atchison general 4s equaled their 1931 high. Delaware & Hudson refunding 4s, Southern Pacific 4½s, and Pennsylvania series D 4½s reached new peak prices. Several New York Central issues gained fractions. Chicago and Northwestern series A 4½s, St. Paul 5s of 1975, a string of Missouri Pacific bonds, and New York, Chicago and St. Louis series C 4½s and series A 5½s made good gains. These lists illustrate the breadth of the movement.

The upturn extended to public utilities but it was not so general as among the other groups. Stock privilege issues were usually higher with the corresponding stocks.

Foreign issues were generally higher. Argentine loans eased off. Brazilian bonds gained sharply. The fiscal agents for the San Paulo 7 per cent coffee realization loan announced that the receipts from the sale of pledged coffee for the ten months ended with April amounted to $8,110,832, of which $4,866,500 were used for the redemptions as of April 1, and the balance is applicable to the Oct. 1 redemptions. An appropriation of $405,542 for the reserve account of the whole loan was made also.

Expect U. S. Will Appeal Oil Merger Ruling Soon

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, May 8.—The United States government is expected to act before the end of the current month on the question of appealing the lower court decision in the Standard Oil of New York-Vacuum Oil merger, in which it was held that it was not a violation of the old Standard Oil dissolution decree.

The department of justice has until June 4 within which to make an appeal from the lower court decision, it was said in Washington today. It was also pointed out that United States Supreme court adjourns on June 1 and no possible action can be had if an appeal is taken before the October session. Solicitor General Thatcher stated definitely that if the lower court decision is appealed it will be taken directly to the United States Supreme court.

CONSTRUCTION OF RIVER CRAFT AIDS STEEL INDUSTRY

Cleveland, O., May 8.—Daily Metal Trade today says: "Automotive interests and furniture makers are taking shipments of full finished steel sheets in slightly increased tonnages. Demand generally, however, continues restricted to small lots. Considerable steel is finding an outlet in construction of new river craft at Pittsburgh. Orders for river craft so far this year involve about 40,000 tons of steel, more than double the tonnage taken for this type of construction in all of last year.

"Fully 40,000 tons of structurals have been delayed from 18 months to two years by postponement of construction of the 6th avenue subway in New York. Buying of steel from warehouse is spotty. Pig iron demand continues restricted, although an increase in inquiry is reported at Cleveland."

National Steel.

I would like to have information on National Steel corporation first 5s, due in 1956. I would like to know the financial setup of this company and its earnings for the first quarter of 1931. Are these bonds suitable for a small investor?—C. M.

National Steel corporation was incorporated in November, 1929, to acquire the entire capital stock of Weirton Steel company and Great Lakes Steel corporation and the holdings of M. A. Hanna company. It is a completely integrated unit. It has large ore reserves and its coal lands are estimated to be sufficient to meet requirements for fifty years. In 1930 the assets of Michigan Steel corporation were purchased.

During 1930 $23,282,806 was expended for additions to property and the company assumed $8,500,000 notes payable to banks. To reimburse the company for these expenditures, to retire certain outstanding funded indebtedness, and to provide additional working capital required by the enlarged capacity of its plants $40,000,000 of first (collateral) mortgage sinking fund 5 per cent bonds, due April 1, 1956, were offered last month.

Subject to certain provisions, additional bonds may be issued only if out of the preceding 40 months net earnings available for interest for two consecutive 12 month periods shall have been twice the interest requirements on total funded debt, including bonds about to be issued.

The bonds are secured by all the capital stock and certain demand mortgage bonds of subsidiaries. The demand bonds constitute a first mortgage lien on all fixed properties with certain exceptions. These properties are carried on the company's books at more than $50,000,000.

On completion of this financing the company will have outstanding $40,000,000 bonds of this issue and 2,156,829 shares of no par capital stock.

Net earnings available for interest for 1930 were $10,561,697, or 5 times interest requirements on this issue. Such net earnings of predecessor companies for 1929 were $15,546,794, and for 1928 $12,640,091.

For the first quarter of 1931 interest requirements were covered more than 4.8 times.

On March 6, 1931, the Weirton, West Virginia, plant was operating at 64 per cent of finishing capacity and the Great Lakes and Michigan plants at 60 per cent of finishing capacity. On March 30, 1931, the company announced that all plants were operating at a profit.

The bonds are considered a business man's investment.

PACIFIC GAS CO. 1930 NET PROFIT SHOWS INCREASE

The annual report of the Pacific Gas and Electric company for 1930 shows a net income of $21,404,141 after all charges, depreciation, and federal taxes. This was equal, after preferred dividends, to $2.07 a share earned on the average of 4,845,584 common shares outstanding during the year, compared with $15,740,486, or $3.52 a share on the average number of shares in the preceding year. Surplus after dividends was $5,175,850, against $4,708,029.

Gross revenue amounted to $76,578,470, against $64,440,583, including properties only since dates of acquisition. Net earnings were $42,653,331, compared with $33,192,798, and total income was $43,444,249, against $33,573,104.

Canada's New Conversion Bonds Taxable After 1933

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

OTTAWA, Ont., May 8.—Canada's new quarter billion dollar conversion loan will have none of the income tax free privileges of the present Victory loan issues, beyond the date of the issues traded in for the new issues. An announcement was made by the prime minister today clearing up the situation, and setting the date for the issuance of the new bonds from May 11 to May 23. The new bonds bearing 4½ per cent will include coupons for the difference in interest of the 5½ per cent bonds being traded in. Thus a 1933 tax free bond traded in will bring a new bond with tax free privileges to 1933 and then become taxable. It will also bear coupons for the extra one per cent interest from now until 1933. The advantage of Canada's conversion loan project, the premier declared, would remove from the horizon a "dark cloud." The brokers' commission was announced as one half of one per cent.

BY FRED HARVEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, May 8.—There was some real excitement down on the stock exchange in the late market dealings today. A sudden gust of buying orders came sweeping out of the sky, and before the widely scattered army of amateur short traders and watchful waiters dozing about the brokerage houses of the city could rub the sleep out of their eyes prices were whirling up all over the board faster than the ticker tape could record them.

Auburn Auto went leaping a full point between sales, United States Steel common, the battered old bellwether of the group, roused itself to hit it up to the tempo of quarter point jumps, and the whole list fell in line with the sprightliest exhibition the street has seen in many a weary-some day.

The gains for lucky holders ran as high as 25⅛ points, the topnotcher being as usual the erratic Auburn. U. S. Steel shot up 3 points to close at 114, American Can rose 3⅛, General Electric nearly 3, General Motors 1⅝, Consolidated Gas, 4¼, and Eastman Kodak 6⅜ points. Recoveries elsewhere in the list ranged anywhere from 1 to 9 points.

Even Coppers Gain.

Every group shared in the improvement, even the lowly coppers defying repeated announcements of new price cuts and reduced demand on the metal to execute a vigorous comeback under the leadership of Anaconda, which advanced more than 2 points.

Railroad shares came to life with an incredible zest, Illinois Central springing ahead for nearly 3 points, New York Central advancing about 2, New Haven 3, and numerous others from 1 to 2 points or more.

Utility shares were conspicuously strong. The oils looked up vigorously and specialties throughout the list registered sharp runups. Minus signs were scarce enough in the final returns to make the party virtually unanimous.

See Turn for Better.

While there was a disposition to credit the rally to the bill rate reduction made by the federal reserve banks, which set a new world's minimum charge for central bank credit, it was probably due as much to natural recovery from the long decline and the completion of necessitous liquidation as to cheap money. Some of the oldest and most reliable brokerage houses of the street have been evincing a more and more bullish feeling in their market letters for a week or more, and few of them have neglected to caution customers of the increasing danger of short selling with stocks at their present levels. When the bank rate cut was announced yesterday many hailed it as the turning point in the long decline, at least one big brokerage house venturing to inform its following that the "bear market seems at last to be at an end."

The market opening today, however, failed to bear out these rosy expectations, and for the first two hours prices merely backed and filled as they have been doing for so many listless days. The strength in the bond market, which was undoubtedly due to the lower rates, finally spread to stocks, however, with the rally gaining in scope and momentum right up to the close. Final prices almost without exception were the best of the day.

Bears in Panic.

Panic overtook some of the bear crowd as the close drew near, with the pace assuming runaway proportions, and their eagerness to cover resulted in unusually heavy sales at rapidly increasing prices in many trading favorites.

Individual features provided sparkle for every department of the list. Woolworth was again the leader of the chain store division, piling more than 3 points on top of its gain of yesterday and the day before. Its enthusiasm was caught by Kresge and Grant, each of which mounted to new tops for the year.

General Motors showed the way for general improvement in the automobile section. United Aircraft was helped by the report of its first quarter earnings amounting to 30 cents a share and rose nearly 3 points.

CHICAGO STOCKS GET OUT OF RUT; PRICES IMPROVE

Bank Rate Reduction Is Factor in Advance.

BY THOMAS FURLONG.

Breaking out its narrow trading area for the first time in several days, the Chicago market registered the first significant improvement of the week yesterday. The character of the dealing continued largely professional, while the covering movement which was responsible for the advance was attributated to the slash made in the New York rediscount.

While the action of the New York bank was subject to various interpretations, many of which were not bullish, it was generally accepted as the factor which injected life into the trading yesterday.

Late Trading Active.

The buoyancy was greatest during the later part of the session. Previously the same sluggishness prevailed which has colored the market during the last week.

The automotive and utility stocks attracted the greatest attention and received a lion's share of the gains made. Cord was the most active with a volume of sales aggregating 24,000 shares. Gains were extended to 2 points or so in some instances. Miscellaneous stocks of all classes reflected the better tone and the closing list contained a liberal supply of moderate gains.

The Midland United company, which recently announced a common stock financing plan, yesterday took over the operation of the Gary Heat Light and Water company, which was acquired from the United States Steel corporation. Resignation of the old board headed by Eugene J. Buffington was followed with the election of the new directors, of which Samuel Insull Jr. is the chairman. George N. Rooker was elected vice president of the company, and will continue in active charge of its operation.

Will Make Offering.

Proceeds of the company financing will be used in the purchase of the Gary utility. Public offering will be made of 631,000 common shares and and additional 629,000 shares will be taken by four other Insull companies, which hold controlling interest in Midland United. The financing is expected to yield the company approximately $32,000,000.

Marshall Sampsell, president of the Associated Telephone Utilities company, announced the acquisition by his company of the Lafayette Telephone company of Lafayette, Ind.

MONEY AND EXCHANGE

Money in Chicago firm, 5@6 per cent on collateral, 5@5½ per cent over the counter; commercial paper, 5½@3% per cent; bankers' acceptances, 1½@1¾ per cent. Chicago clearings yesterday were $74,400,000, compared with $83,600,000 a week ago and $103,300,000 a year ago.

DRY GOODS.

NEW YORK, May 8.—(AP)—Cotton goods sales continued light and prices were easy today. Rayon sales have quickened a little in the past ten days, chiefly for weaving and warp knitting purposes. Wool goods were in moderate demand for fall delivery. Raw silk continued low, with more interest being shown at the low prices for late delivery stocks.

Estimated receipts at Chicago today: Cattle, 500; hogs, 8,000; sheep, 5,000.

The hog market continued to sink to lower price levels yesterday, but demand broadened toward the finish when choice light weight stock could be purchased as low as $7.10@7.20, indicating that hogs are desirable to packing interests around the $7.00 line. The extreme top for the day at $7.35, and the general average at $6.70 equaled the lowest since December, 1922. Outside demand was larger, shippers taking 5,500, the largest number in two weeks, barring Monday. Three larger houses also bought more, taking 2,500 toward the finish, and only 1,500 were left at the close.

According to reports, the interior packer is buying hogs freely. While the receipts at 11 leading markets so far this year show a decrease of 331,000 hogs, the federal inspected slaughter for the United States for the first four months of 1931 at 16,515,252 compare with 15,908,226 a year ago. The April slaughter at 2,488,480 was the largest on record for April, barring 1923 and 1924.

September Hogs Bring $8.00.

Light weights for September delivery recovered the loss recorded earlier in the week, while mediums for next September delivery went down 10c more. Two carloads of September light sold at $8.00, while mediums for the same month were sold at $7.65. June light were bid $7.40 and offered at $7.75. On the "to arrive" market, light weights averaging 170@210 lbs were bid $7.25 for next Monday's delivery.

Yesterday's meager supply of 2,000 cattle changed hands slowly at the week's 25@50c decline, although no choice grades were available. Most of the supply consisted of stock selling within a range of $6.65@7.35, while the best available stopped at $7.75, averaging 1,414 lbs. Supplies all week have been lighter than a week ago, with the exception of Wednesday. However, following last week's immense slaughter, light supplies are necessary to halt the break.

Lamb Prices Decline.

Lambs tumbled 25c in value yesterday, wet fleeces and poorer quality accounting for some of the loss. Sorting was harder on the break. Best lambs to shippers and city butchers stopped at $9.60, while bulk of medium to good kinds to packers brought $8.00@8.35. Shorn lambs sold at $7.35@8.25. Aged sheep and yearlings were unchanged. There was some inquiry for shearing stock. One load went to the country at $8.50. Sheep receipts at Chicago this week stand second smallest since the week ending Feb. 7. There is usually a substantial decrease in supplies at this time of year.

Receipts at Chicago for today are estimated at 500 cattle, 8,000 hogs, and 1,000 sheep, against 429 cattle, 7,338 hogs, and 10,183 sheep, the previous Saturday, and 345 cattle, 8,083 hogs, and 8,184 sheep a year ago.

Probable receipts of hogs at Chicago for next Monday are estimated from 14,000 to 15,000. F. W. Young marked 14,000; J. A. Bunyan, 25,000; A. G. Wallbaser and W. T. Reneker, 29,000; O. C. # PRICES OF WHEAT MOVE UPWARD; CLOSE NEAR TOP

Buying Develops in Corn and Values Rise.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

While further rains were reported in the Canadian northwest, they were generally regarded as insufficient, only 10 points out of 33 stations reporting to the weather bureau showing one-quarter of an inch or more of moisture, and with the forecast for generally fair over the week-end there was considerable change in sentiment yesterday.

Short covering and reinstating recently sold out lines advanced prices on the Chicago Board of Trade ¾@1¼c from the early low, and the finish was about the top, with the new crop months showing net gains of ⅝@1½c, with July 62¾@62¾c, September 62¾@62¾c, and December 65¾c. Old May was unchanged at 82¾c.

The Winnipeg wheat market dipped early, but rallied on a fair class of buying and closed ⅝@⅞c higher, with July quoted at 62¾c at the last, fears of a return of dry weather being a factor. Many points in the west failed to receive any moisture at all, according to private reports.

Shorts Even Up.

No precipitation of consequence was shown in the American spring wheat area. Toward the last there was some evening up on the part of shorts for the government report on winter wheat, due later in the day, and the strength in corn also had some effect. Selling against offers checked the bulge.

A scarcity of cash wheat is being reflected in the May delivery at Liverpool, which closed ⅝d higher for the day, at equal to 67c per bu, or only ¼c under the July, which was off ¾d at the finish. The trade, however, expect large world's shipments for the current week, probably close to 20,000,000 bu, and the heaviest so far this year, as North America put 10,172,000 bu afloat during the week, or practically double the amount that cleared a year ago.

Little Cut in Supplies.

There was less than a normal reduction in supplies of wheat in the United States, Canada, Argentina, and Australia during the first three months of this year, the department of agriculture estimating that total supplies available for export and carry over in the four countries at 735,000,000 bu, or 143,000,000 bu less than on Jan. 1, and the total compared with 615,000,000 bu a year ago, when there was a reduction of 114,000,000 bu from Jan. 1 to April 1. Two years ago the apparent disappearance was 223,000,000 bu and three years ago 196,000,000 bu.

A decrease of around 15 per cent in the spring wheat acreage in Canada was suggested by the Bank of Montreal weekly crop report, but the final area is expected to depend on weather conditions. Export demand at the seaboard was only fair, with some business in both Manitobas and hard winters, but the quantities were not given.

Corn Is Strong Close.

There was no material pressure on the corn market, and while there was a fractional decline later, aggressive buying by locals and commission houses absorbed the surplus in the pit and a rally of ⅞@1¼c from the low point followed. The close was well toward the top, with net gains of ⅞@¾c, May being 58¼c, July 59¾c, September 58¾@58¾c, and December 51¾@51¾c. Selling against offers checked the advance.

Cold and wet weather prevailed over the greater part of the main corn belt, which is expected to delay field work and also the movement, but the shipping demand was again very slow. The spot basis, however, was steady to ¼c higher. Shipping sales were 17,000 bu. The trade looks for a fairly good reduction to be shown in local stocks in Monday's visible supply statement.

Pressure on May Oats.

There was some pressure on May oats from longs early, but it was finally absorbed, and with the strength in corn the finish was at net gains of ¼@⅝c, with May 28, July 28¼@28¼c, September 28¼c, and December 30¾c. Shipping demand was slow. Crop reports were generally favorable.

Houses with northwestern connections were on the buying side of the nearby deliveries of rye and the market developed independent strength, closing ¼@1¼c higher, with May 36¾c, July 38¼c September 39c, and December 42¼c. A cargo of 305,000 bu cleared from Duluth for Chicago on Thursday.

SMALL INTEREST IN LARD

A little scattered trading in lard futures, with shorts covering and commission houses selling moderately, featured the market yesterday. Hogs were lower and lard futures closed with a break of 5@10c. Bellies were 7½c lower on May and 20c off on July, trading being confined mainly to the latter delivery. Liverpool was unchanged to 3d lower. Export clearances were 1,577,376 lbs. Hog supplies were larger than the previous week, but short of last year's. Prices follow:

CASH-GRAIN NEWS

There was a moderate export business reported in Canadian wheat and in domestic hard winters, but the foreign demand was not active with buyers disposed to hold off until after the issuance of the American crop report. A little interest was shown in Canadian coarse grains, but the total business which has been passing in the latter is not known, but is understood to have been fairly large as far as barley is concerned.

Local handlers sold 2,000 bu wheat, 17,000 bu corn, 32,000 bu oats and 3,000 bu rye to the domestic trade with 50,000 bu wheat sold to go to store. Deliveries on May contracts aggregated 21,000 bu wheat, 50,000 bu corn, 65,000 bu oats and 58,000 bu rye.

Demand for country run cash wheat was better with the spot basis steady to ¼c higher. No. 1 red brought ⅛@⅜c over; No. 1 hard, 1¼c over and No. 1 northern, 1@1¼c over May with No. 2 red May price to ½c over; No. 2 hard, 1c over, and No. 2 northern, May price.

Offerings of cash corn were not large and the basis was steady to ½c higher. No. 2 mixed brought ¾c under May with yellow ⅛@⅜c over and white, 1¾@2c over the future. No. 3 yellow was May price to ¼c under and white ¾c over, while No. 4 yellow sold at 1¼@1½c under May.

Cash oats basis was ¾@1¼c lower. No. 2 white, 1¼@1¾c over, and No. 3 white, ½@1c over May.

SHARP UPTURN IN COTTON

A higher market for stocks, combined with unfavorable weather and crop reports from the south, were factors responsible for a covering movement on the part of shorts of sufficient magnitude to advance prices yesterday around 20 points at the extreme and made a close with net gains of 11@18 points on futures in Chicago, 14@17 points in New Orleans, and 15@16 points in New York. Spot cotton in the latter market was up 15 points, reaching 10c per lb, while New Orleans advanced 20 points and finished at 9.70c, and Galveston and Houston were strong at 9.80c. Liverpool closed 1@2 points lower, with spot sales 4,000 bales. Rain has been too wet in some sections of the south, causing the rotting of the plant. Spinners' takings of American cotton for the week was 220,000 bales, and into-sight movement for the week was estimated at 85,000 to 95,000 bales.

Dallas wired that the temperature was near freezing, which checked planting. Fertilizer business for 5 months was 72 per cent of last year's. A private report estimates the acreage at 41,511,000. Prices follow:

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

A bearish construction was put on the government report on winter wheat. It was said that although the estimates were not as high as generally expected, should they be maintained through harvest there would be enough wheat for all domestic requirements, regardless of what spring wheat might be raised. Sentiment is more mixed, however, and caution is shown in making sales on breaks, as there is a growing belief that present prices offset all bearish conditions and that should there be any change in the crop situation to cause deterioration the markets will do better. In case of an advance in wheat, traders say that other grains will follow to a moderate extent.

One of the largest local traders is said to be bullish and long on corn. He has bought it steadily for four days, while a number of local traders have been liberal sellers. A few of them were particularly active on the selling side late yesterday, forcing prices off from the top and preventing "offers" from being operative.

"Steady progress has been made in wheat seeding in the western provinces," says the Bank of Montreal crop report. "At present 50 to 95 per cent has been completed, with work in Manitoba further advanced. There is sufficient moisture for germination in northern areas, but more rain is needed in the south. Reserve is low and soil drifting has been severe in Saskatchewan."

Low prices of rye have attracted attention of a number of large local and outside speculators who have bought quietly all week. Yesterday, however, there was the largest crowd in the rye pit in months, with scant offerings early and good selling by the northwest later. Their offerings were absorbed by local traders, who express themselves as emphatically bullish, as July rye is selling 24c under wheat. Much of the buying and strength was based on a report from Duluth that 2,000,000 bu No. 2 Canadian rye had been sold for export.

A striking difference between the quality of American hard winters and that of Argentines is noticeable in reports from Liverpool. The Argentine wheat is mostly of poor quality, while American grain is high grade. This has brought export buying of the latter of late, presumably for mixing with the lower quality of Argentine grain. The Argentine grain sells comparatively slow at low prices, while American wheat is readily taken at good premiums. Quality of American hard winters, held by the farm board, is said to be 98.5 per cent, only 1½ per cent being low grade.

"July wheat contracts this year occupy an unusual position, in that the rule enacted last fall made delivery conditions very exacting," says Harvey Williams of Thomson & McKinnon. "In the first place only the No. 1 and No. 2 hard grades of wheat and corn are deliverable. No track deliveries are permissible except on the last three business days and then only of country run grain, excluding everything loaded out of terminal elevators, or junction point houses, where there are mixing facilities. This almost automatically eliminates kiln dried corn. This may, and very possibly will, create a tight position in July, especially in corn."

TESTIFIES ABOUT REPURCHASE OF UNITS OF STOCK

New York, May 8.—(AP)—Bank of United States Bankus corporation stock units, Saul Singer, bank official, testified today, were sold by the Marcus-Singer syndicate on agreement to repurchase if the market value dropped, but an affiliated concern made good on the repurchase provision. The affiliate, he said, was the City Financial corporation.

In his fifth day as the first defense witness at the trial of himself and three other bank officers on a charge of misapplying funds, the executive vice president insisted the syndicate sold the units in the first place as the representative of the affiliate. Therefore, he contended, the City Financial was obligated to fulfill the repurchase provision of the sales agreement.

The testimony was obtained in cross-examination by Max D. Steur, special prosecutor, who had the bank officer review the entire operations of the syndicate which he and Bernard Marcus, indicted president and co-defendant, managed in 1929.

Singer vigorously denied the syndicate's operations in bank units was motivated by personal interest, but under questioning said he and Marcus together suffered a paper loss of $150,000 every time the market price fell 1 point.

In one instance, Singer testified, he, Marcus, and C. Stanley Mitchell, chairman of the board, agreed to purchase 10,000 bank units which Samuel Barnett, president of the Municipal bank, received when his bank was absorbed by the Bank of United States through an exchange of stock. The purchase price agreed upon was $225, and Singer testified it was taken off Barnett's hands, not by them, but by City Financial.

Stock sales with repurchase agreements were the object of inquiry by Assistant District Attorney Ralph K. Jacobs of Kings county and Special Deputy Attorney General Israel H. Perskin in Brooklyn. Perskin, who is presiding at an inquiry into the activities of the Bank of United States through an exchange of stock. The purchase price agreed upon was $225, and Singer testified it was taken off Barnett's hands, not by them, but by City Financial.

Stock sales with repurchase agreements were the object of inquiry by Assistant District Attorney Ralph K. Jacobs of Kings county and Special Deputy Attorney General Israel H. Perskin in Brooklyn. Perskin, who is presiding at an inquiry into the activities of the Bank of United States through its seventeen Brooklyn branches, heard several depositors testify they bought Bank of United States units understanding they could get their money back if their market price dropped. Managers and assistant managers of branches have denied the bank made any such guarantee in selling units to depositors.
